Introduction

If Star Wars is an extraordinarily rich and detailed fantasy world, LEGO® Star Wars® is that same fantasy world made entirely of colored bricks. In LEGO Star Wars, the characters, vehicles, settings, and weapons of the movies are instantly recognizable, yet subtly different. A wealth of movie-accurate details surprise and delight even the most dedicated Star Wars fans, from the steering vanes on a Tatooine skiff to the chin guns adorning the head of a lumbering AT-AT walker. The LEGO Group's designers are endlessly creative with their lexicon of LEGO elements—such as a cupcake and a smear of frosting given new life as the glowing eye and armored shell of a droideka. The only thing more enjoyable is encountering new elements made especially for a LEGO Star Wars set, such as the printed flap on the cockpit of the mini AT-ST, or a brick from an X-wing cockpit complete with miniature screens and dials. It's as much fun to spot the differences between the movie originals and the LEGO versions, whether it's a change of color, a reconfigured interior, or a new feature. With LEGO Star Wars, curiosity is rewarded: Headlamps flip aside to reveal missile launchers, secret compartments hide Holocrons, and Gungan subs sprout their own mini-subs in times of trouble. Visual Dictionary has now been thoroughly updated and expanded with five additional years of LEGO designs—yellow faces have become flesh-colored, starfighters and vehicles have been revised with even more detail and movie accuracy, and new Star Wars characters and sets have been translated into brick form. Whether a set is brand-new or an established classic, the reason for its appeal has stayed the same: LEGO Star Wars exists in both the Star Wars world and the LEGO world, making it fascinating to children and collectors alike.

TIMELINE

The LEGO Group released its first Star Wars sets in 1999 to coincide with the release of Star Wars: Episode I The Phantom Menace. Models were then issued for each new movie in the Prequel Trilogy (Episodes I–III), as well as sets based on the Classic Trilogy, the Star Wars: The Clone Wars animated TV show, and the computer games Star Wars: The Force Unleashed and Star Wars: The Old Republic. Then, in 2013, LEGO Star Wars developed a new life of its own with the animated TV show LEGO Star Wars: The Yoda Chronicles.

DATA BOXES

Throughout the book, each LEGO Star Wars set is identified with a data box (see example below), providing the official name of the set, the year it was first released, the LEGO identification number of the set, the number of LEGO pieces, or elements, in the set (excluding minifigures), and the source that inspired the model. The abbreviations "EP I" to "EP VI" are used for each of the six movies (EP I, for instance, being Star Wars: Episode I The Phantom Menace); "CW" is the animated Star Wars: The Clone Wars TV show and movie; and "EU" refers to the Expanded Universe.

Chapter 1: Prequel Trilogy & Clone Wars

Anakin Skywalker

Anakin's journey from a slave boy to perhaps the most capable and ambitious Jedi ever is filled with action and danger. Anakin has always been an incredible pilot and has flown everything from "borrowed" speeders to custom-designed Jedi starfighters during the Clone Wars. But Anakin's daring has its price: The loss of his hand in battle with Count Dooku starts a process of dehumanization that will end in the full body armor of Darth Vader.

ANAKIN (NABOO PILOT)

Naboo Starfighter

As a boy, Anakin flies a Naboo N-1 starfighter and blows up the Trade Federation's Droid Control Ship. He fits in the cockpit, boarding the fighter via a ladder that extends from the cargo speeder included with this set. A mechanism on the underside ejects R2-D2 from the droid socket in case of trouble. In this set Anakin has a natural face color and short legs. Swiveling his head reveals another face, wearing Podracing goggles.

Coruscant Airspeeder

Teenage Anakin is now a headstrong Padawan, training under Jedi Master Obi-Wan Kenobi. Anakin wears a Padawan braid (printed on his minifigure's shirt.) He and Obi-Wan sit in this airspeeder with its exposed turbojets. The Jedi store their lightsabers in a secret compartment. Can the Jedi catch up with assassin Zam Wesell's speeder, as they weave through the skyscrapers of the city planet, Coruscant?

ANAKIN (PADAWAN)

YOUNG PADAWAN
Protecting Padmé Amidala, Anakin falls in love with the brave senator. He briefly wields a green lightsaber on Geonosis. This figure came with the Republic Gunship (set 75021).

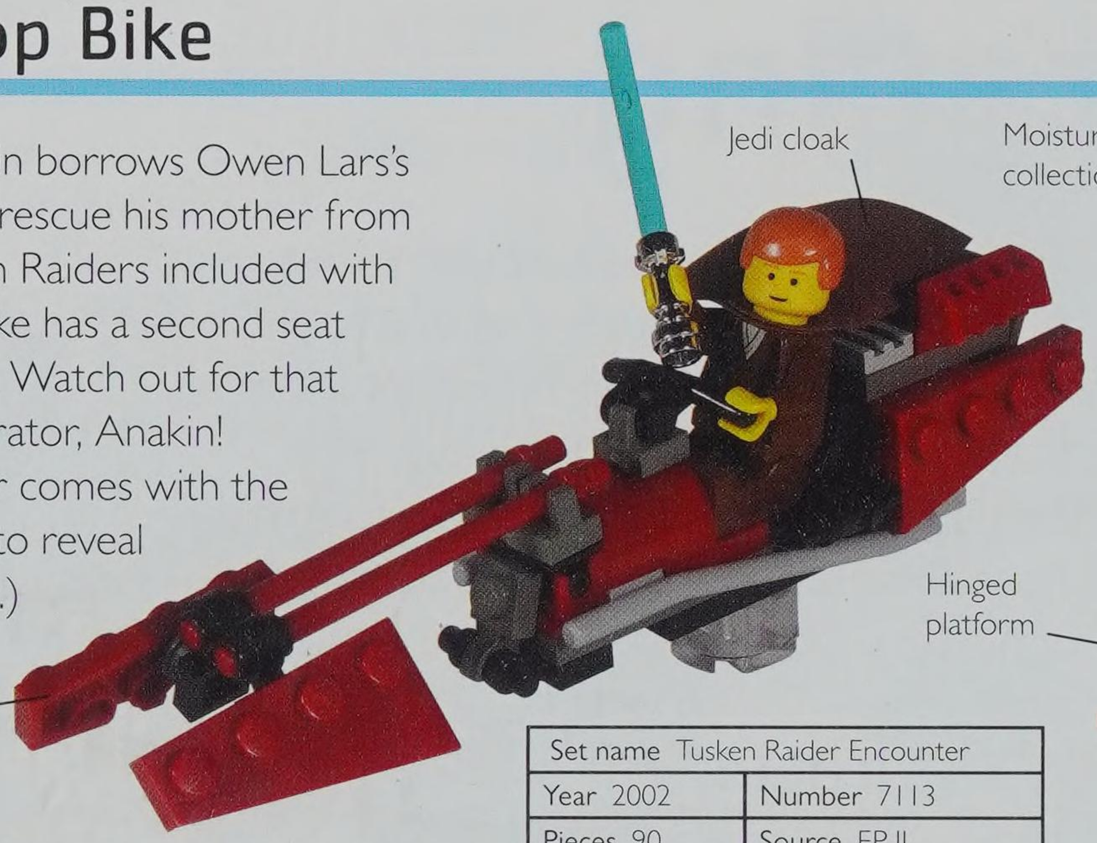

PADMÉ (PEASANT DISGUISE)

UNDERCOVER QUEEN
When Anakin first meets his future wife, Padmé Naberrie is disguised as a peasant for her trip to Tatooine. In Darth Maul's Sith Infiltrator (set 7961), Padmé has a natural skin tone.

Swoop Bike

Padawan Anakin borrows Owen Lars's swoop bike to rescue his mother from the two Tusken Raiders included with this set. The bike has a second seat behind Anakin. Watch out for that moisture vaporator, Anakin! (The vaporator comes with the set and opens to reveal secret controls.)

MOISTURE VAPORATOR

Jedi Starfighter

Anakin is now a Jedi Knight, with a scarred face, pilot headset, cyborg hand, and black robe. He pilots a custom yellow starfighter (actually, an Eta-2 Actis Interceptor) with movable wings and R2-D2's accompanying minifigure fully fixed in the astromech socket. The original version in 2005 featured only R2-D2's headpiece.

After a lightsaber duel with Count Dooku, Anakin has a cyborg hand. Turn his head to reveal his Sith eyes after falling to the dark side. This minifigure, complete with brown Jedi cape, came with Palpatine's Arrest (set 9526).

ANAKIN (JEDI/SITH)

The Twilight

Anakin's personal starship in the Clone Wars is a battered Corellian G9 Rigger freighter, the Twilight. Anakin first "borrows" the damaged ship from a landing platform on Teth, when he and Ahsoka Tano are rescuing Jabba the Hutt's son, Rotta. Anakin has since repaired and upgraded its weapons and systems.

Podracing

Ladies and gentlemen, Dugs and Hutts, please join us at the Boonta Eve Classic, the most keenly fought and downright dangerous Podrace on Tatooine. Experienced racers Sebulba, Gasgano, and Aldar Beedo will power up their oversized podracers, while the human newcomer, nine-year-old Anakin Skywalker, climbs aboard his self-made machine, watched nervously by his supporters. The tension here is electric!

Sebulba's Podracer

The dastardly Dug named Sebulba is determined to win the Boonta Eve Classic—and doesn't care what dirty tricks he uses to do so. Sebulba's Podracer sports secret flip-up saws that the Dug uses to saw through rival racers' machines, along with opening flaps on the nozzles of his turbocharged engines.

Anakin's Podracer

What's that blur on the Tatooine horizon? It's Anakin, in flying goggles, piloting his super-fast podracer with "glowing" power couplings and hinged front air scoops (for additional control when cornering). Anakin built the pod himself, and relies on his Force-aided reflexes while racing. Padmé hopes Anakin will at least survive this dangerous enterprise.

SLAVE SPECTATOR
A Mos Espa slave, the Rodian Wald, cheers on Anakin as he races in the Boonta Eve Classic. But Wald doubts Anakin can win the race—after all, he's never even managed to finish a competition before.

WALD

JUNK DEALER
The Toydarian Watto is Anakin's master, and doesn't know that the boy has secretly built a podracer out of surplus parts. Watto loves to gamble, and usually bets heavily on the unscrupulous Sebulba.

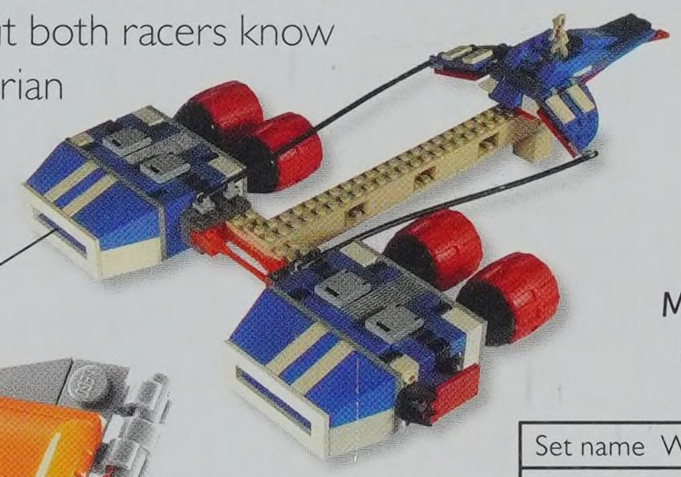

Boonta Eve Podracers

Tatooine podracer pilots such as Gasgano and Aldar Beedo rely on super-fast vehicles to stand a chance of winning the Boonta Eve Classic. Beedo looks for ways to make his Mark IV Flat-Twin Turbojet Podracer even faster, while Gasgano fine-tunes his Ord Pedrovia Podracer. Watto's junkyard is the place to find spare parts and custom accessories, or even to build a new craft. Perhaps parts from Mawhonic's GPE-3130 racer might prove useful–but both racers know that the winged Toydarian drives a hard bargain.

ALDAR BEEDO

BRICK FACTS

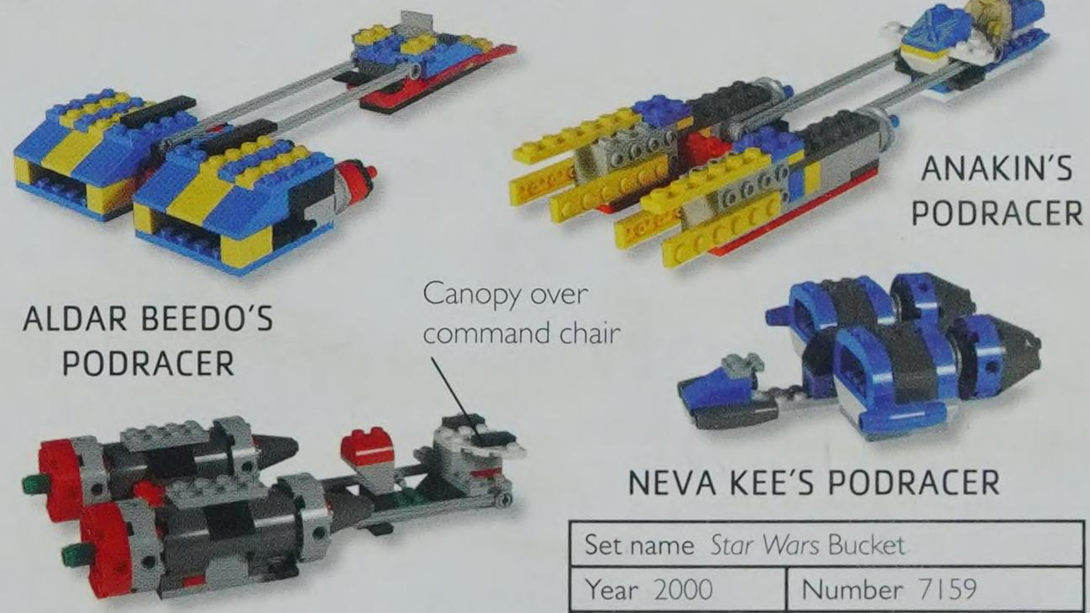

Aldar Beedo appears in two forms. This version, from the Star Wars Bucket (set 7159, from 2000), is made from battle droid pieces: His head has a breathing mask and pilot's helmet. But in Watto's Junkyard (set 7186, from 2001), he has a custom mold.

Other Podracers

Lined up and ready to race, simplified versions of Anakin's and Aldar Beedo's Podracers rev up alongside Neva Kee's experimental machine, with its cockpit placed in front of the massive engines (which could be dangerous!), and Clegg Holdfast's Volvec KT9 Wasp Podracer, with a winged protective canopy over its cockpit.

Obi-Wan Kenobi

For a Jedi who's not crazy about flying, Obi-Wan Kenobi pilots a starfighter a lot of the time—though he can't help losing them, too! Kenobi trains headstrong Anakin Skywalker and goes on missions to far-flung planets including Utapau and Mustafar. Under the Empire, an exiled Obi-Wan meets Luke Skywalker and fights a final duel against his former Padawan, now named Darth Vader.

Jedi Starfighter

A yellow-faced Kenobi, Jedi Master to Anakin Skywalker, wears a headset when piloting his Delta-7 Aethersprite light interceptor. Kenobi's trusty astromech, R4-P17 (styled slightly differently from the movie), provides support. Together, they duel with Jango Fett's Slave 1, blasting by the asteroids above rocky Geonosis!

Padawan

In Star Wars: Episode I The Phantom Menace, Obi-Wan is Qui-Gon Jinn's Padawan, and joins his master in trying to protect Queen Amidala from the Sith warrior Darth Maul. Obi-Wan is capable but sometimes headstrong—swivel his 2011 head to reveal a face with a knowing smirk that might have led to a stern lecture from Master Qui-Gon.

OBI-WAN (JEDI KNIGHT)

JEDI TEACHER
Anakin proves to be a rebellious apprentice, which may explain Obi-Wan's testy expression here. Previous Episode II minifigures of Obi-Wan had yellow faces. This minifigure is from the Republic Gunship set (75021).

Jedi Interceptor (Red)

During the battle above Coruscant, Kenobi (now with a flesh-colored face) pilots a red Eta-2 Actis Interceptor. This ship is available only in this set, which also includes Anakin's yellow Interceptor, two vulture droids, a tri-fighter, and—watch out, Obi-Wan!—two buzz droids.

Like all Interceptors, this ship is too small to feature a hyperdrive, so it must connect to an external hyperdrive booster ring. Jedi Master Kit Fisto, also included with the set, provides backup.

Jedi Order

For millennia, the Jedi were the guardians of peace and justice in the galaxy. Within their massive temple on Coruscant, they trained children strong in the Force to become new generations of Padawans, Jedi Knights, and eventually Jedi Masters. During the Clone Wars, the Jedi became military leaders, fighting alongside clone troopers—but in vain. The Sith emerged victorious and destroyed the Jedi ranks as darkness engulfed the galaxy.

Yoda

Grand Master Yoda helped train Dooku before the Count abandoned the Jedi Order and joined the Sith. This minifigure, with its animation-style eye printing and head mold, looks like it could have jumped off the screen. It's from Duel on Geonosis (set 75017), released in 2013, in which Yoda saves Anakin and Obi-Wan after Dooku defeats them in a saber duel.

Mace Windu

A member of the Jedi Council, Mace is renowned for his skill with a lightsaber and his stern manner. His minifigure's saber blade is a unique purple. As a senior member of the Council, Mace commands great respect from younger Jedi, who rarely risk his wrath. Other minifigures with "bald" head pieces include Lobot, Asajj Ventress, Sugi, Turk Falso, and the Tusken Raider.

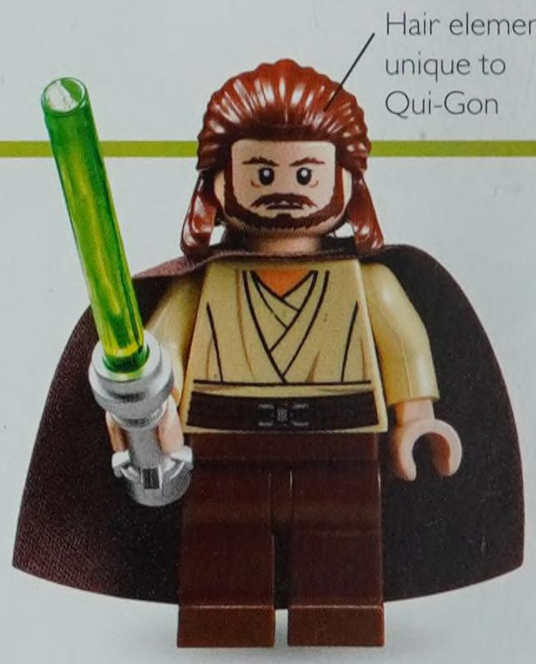

Jedi Masters

A Jedi who has trained a Padawan through to Jedi Knighthood earns the rank of Jedi Master. Twelve senior Jedi Masters form the Jedi Council, which makes decisions for the entire Jedi Order. The many species who make up the Jedi Order have expanded the varied collection of LEGO minifigures with weird and wonderful new head pieces.

OBI-WAN KENOBI

Once Qui-Gon's Padawan, Obi-Wan earns honors for his skill as a negotiator during the Clone Wars.

QUI-GON JINN

Qui-Gon's 2011 minifigure has lots of detail, including an updated tunic and utility belt.

AAYLA SECURA

A Twi'lek Jedi Knight, Aayla appears in Clone Turbo Tank (set 8098) in 2010. Her head top is unique.

SAESEE TIIN

Saesee's second minifigure, from Palpatine's Arrest (set 9526) in 2012, has teeth bared for combat.

KI-ADI-MUNDI

The Cerean Jedi Ki-Adi-Mundi's minifigure has a cone head top with creases and a ponytail.

Barriss Offee

Barriss is a by-the-book Padawan. Her 2010 minifigure fights alongside Luminara on Geonosis and befriends Ahsoka Tano, escaping a number of wartime perils.

Luminara Unduli

Mirialan Jedi Luminara Unduli's 2005 minifigure came with a light-up saber. Her 2011 minifigure, which rides a BARC speeder in the Battle of Geonosis (set 7869), has two faces and new detail on the head, torso, and legs.

STASS ALLIE

This Tholothian Jedi appears in Homing Spider Droid (set 75016), in 2013. Her headdress is unique.

KIT FISTO

In 2007 Nautolan Jedi Kit Fisto was the first minifigure to have a rubber headpiece. His 2012 variant gained a cape.

SHAAK TI

Shaak Ti's 2011 minifigure comes with a unique rubber head piece with head-tails at front and back.

EVEN PIELL

A scarred Lannik Jedi, Even appeared with the Jedi fighter of his friend Saesee Tiin in 2012.

COLEMAN TREBOR

A hulking Vurk Jedi, Coleman fights alongside Mace Windu in the 2013 AT-TE set (75019).

Ahsoka Tano

Young Ahsoka Tano is Anakin Skywalker's Jedi Padawan during the Clone Wars. She is a Togruta—a species with colorful skin and two long "head-tails." The brown-and-gray legs on this 2010 version of Ahsoka are identical to those on Boba Fett.

MYSTERY JEDI

The end of the Clone Wars sees most Jedi killed and the Jedi Temple ransacked, with many records lost. All we know about this Jedi (whose name may have been Bob) is that he once flew on a Republic gunship (set 7163).

JEDI BOB

Jedi Fleet

The Jedi Knights' many missions on behalf of the Republic take them across the galaxy in a variety of transports, including the diplomatic cruisers called "Coruscant reds" and agile shuttles such as the T-6. With the arrival of the Clone Wars, the Jedi take to the spacelanes in starfighters specially made for them, becoming aces in dogfights against Separatist droid fighters and other enemies.

T-6 Jedi Shuttle

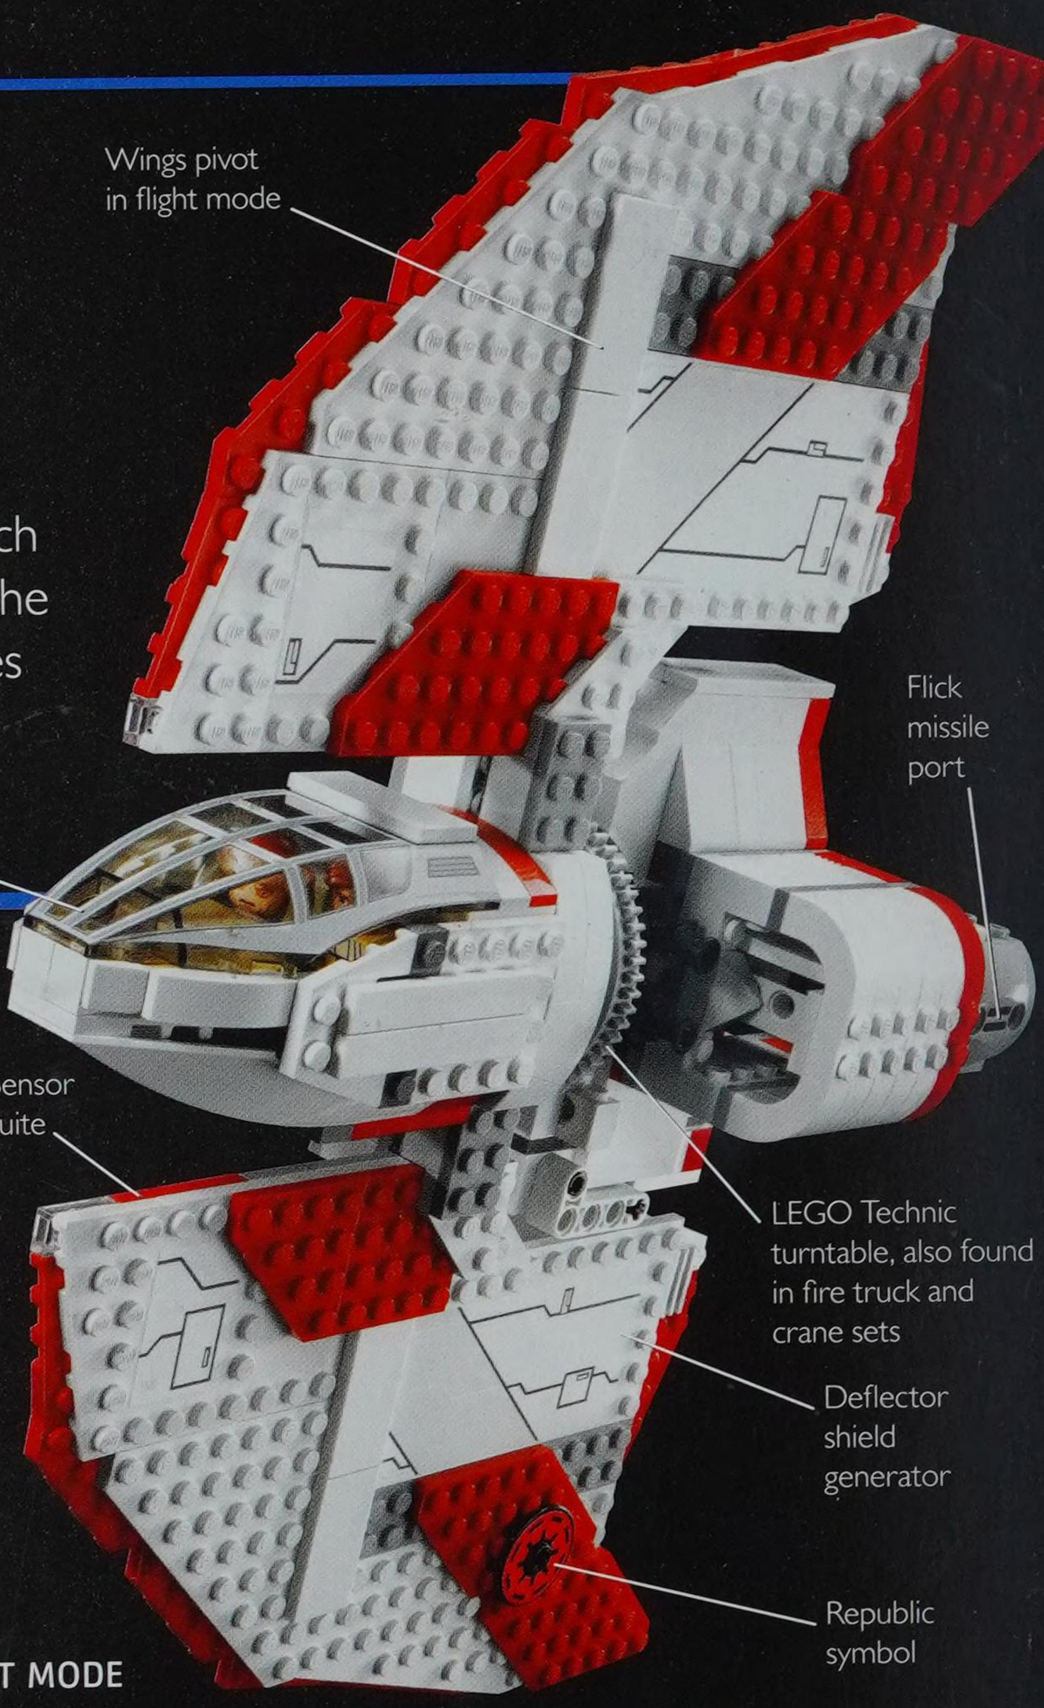

The T-6 shuttle's cockpit is designed to remain upright during flight maneuvers, with the wings rotating around it. Thanks to LEGO designers, Anakin Skywalker, Obi-Wan Kenobi, Shaak Ti, and Saesee Tiin can use the cockpit as an escape pod—as it detaches from the shuttle in case the craft takes too much of a beating in combat.

Jedi Starfighters

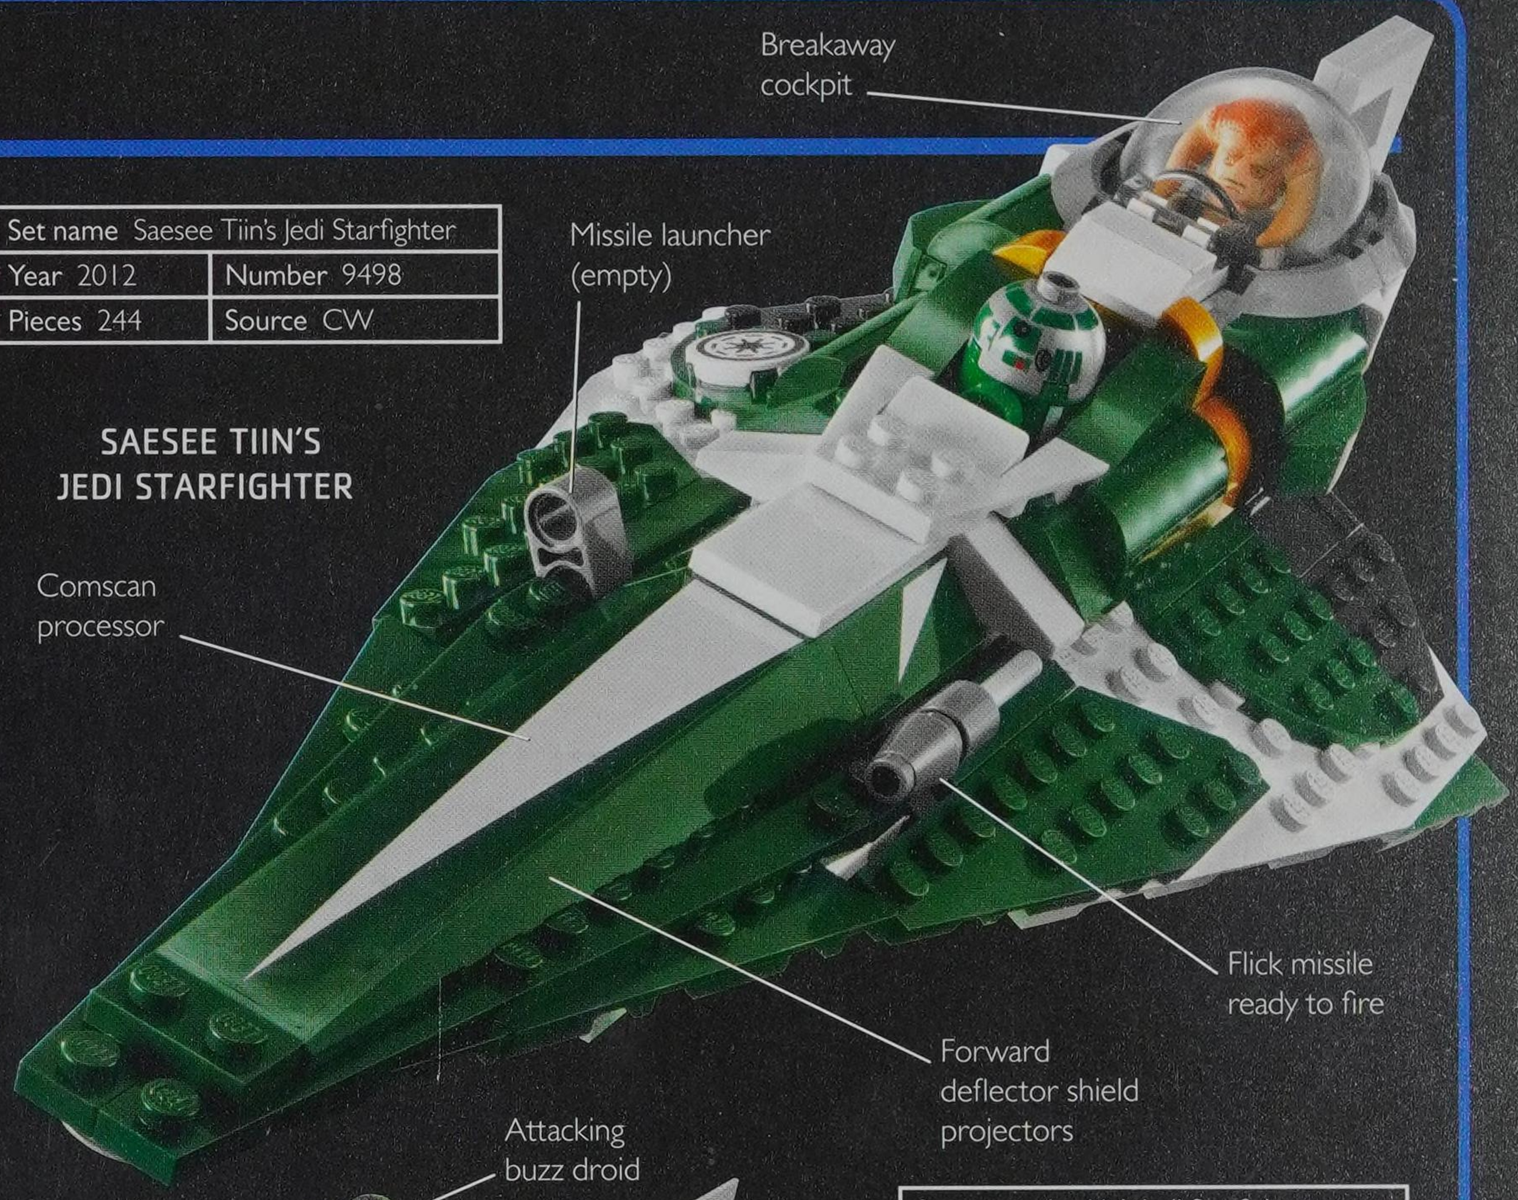

Under the leadership of ace pilot Saesee Tiin, the Jedi train on Delta-7B Aethersprite-class interceptors. These are innovative strike fighters built to respond to the lightning-fast reflexes of Force-wielding Jedi. Each fighter is tailored for its pilot and has its own quirks in both the galaxy far, far away and the LEGO world: Saesee Tiin's cockpit breaks away as an escape pod, Anakin's fighter can launch R2-D2, Plo Koon's cockpit has an ejection seat, and Ahsoka Tano and Mace Windu's ships can fire multiple missiles.

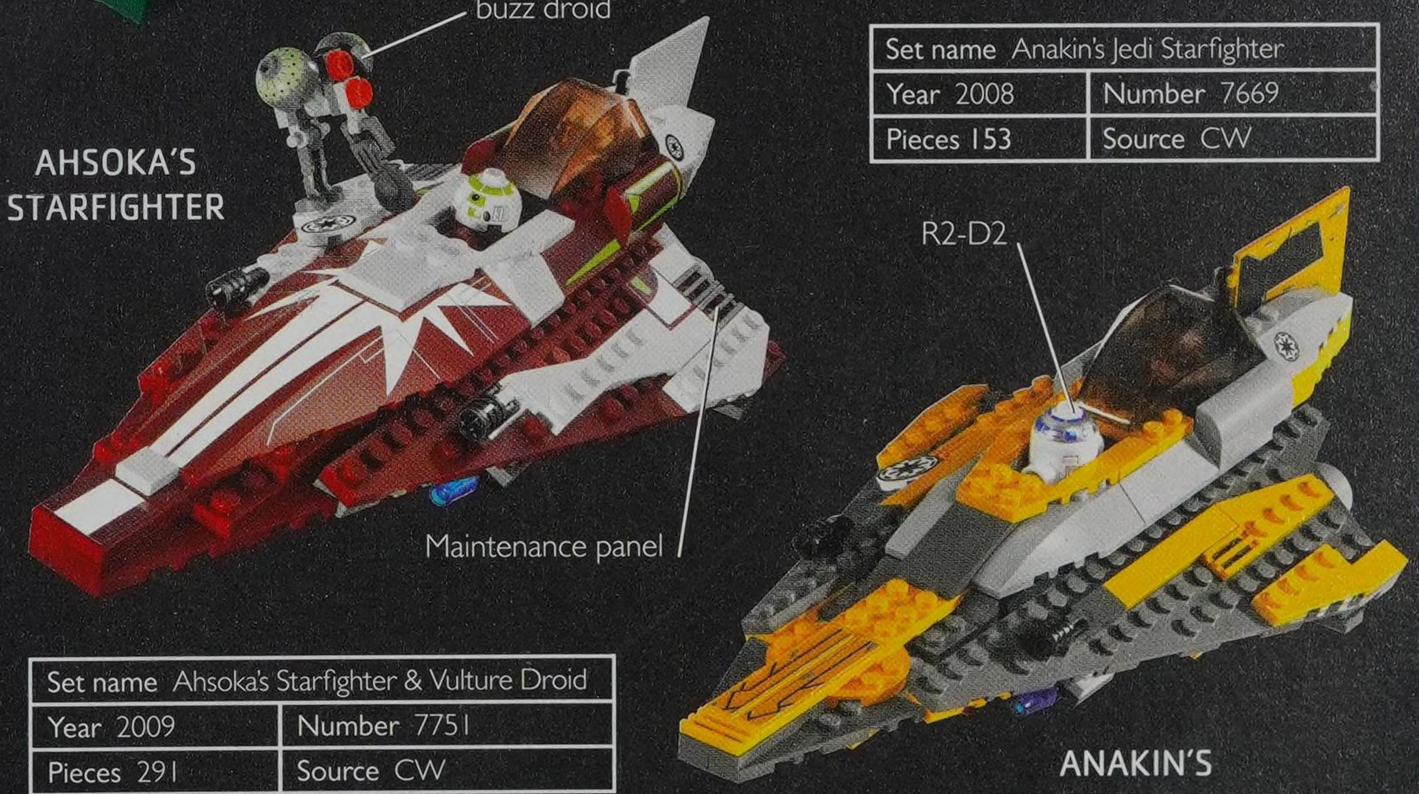

ASTROMECHS

Astromech droids help the Jedi plot safe courses through hyperspace, repair damage to their fighters, and handle the routines of spaceflight. Some develop personalities and a rapport with their Jedi partners. Most astromechs are variants of the same standard mold, but their varied color schemes and printed details make them individuals.

His true identity is Darth Sidious, the Sith Lord who seeks to destroy the Jedi and control the galaxy.

Venator-Class Republic Attack Cruiser

In secret, Dooku is the apprentice of Darth Sidious, and is called Darth Tyrannus. He works to advance Sidious's plot to defeat the Jedi, not suspecting that his master plans to replace him with a younger, more powerful apprentice.

SITH LORD
A noble by birth, Dooku wears an elegant cape with a silver clasp. This version of the Count, from the 2013 set Duel on Geonosis (75017), has a natural skin tone and a saber with a curved hilt.

Duel on Geonosis

Dooku flees the fight on Geonosis, seeking to escape with the secret plans for the Death Star. He duels with Yoda in an abandoned factory that serves as a hangar for the Count's Solar Sailer. Asajj Ventress

Asajj once trained as a Jedi, but turned to the dark side after the death of her Master, becoming Dooku's servant. She fights using twin lightsabers. Asajj and Savage Opress come with the Sith Nightspeeder (set 7957), released in 2011.

Clone Troopers

At the start of the Clone Wars, clone troopers wear Phase I armor, which is loosely based on Jango Fett's Mandalorian shock trooper armor. Informally called "the body bucket," this armor is heavy and often uncomfortable. Colored stripes denote rank. During the later part of the Clone Wars, Phase II armor mainly replaces Phase I armor. Phase II armor is stronger, lighter, and more adaptable than the earlier type, with many specialist variations. Color now denotes unit affiliation rather than rank.

CLONE TROOPER (PHASE I)

Phase I Clone Troopers

Phase I clone trooper minifigures wear basic white armor with white helmets. Early Phase I clones had a faceless black head piece and carried a loudhailer for a weapon. In 2008, a new version of the Phase I clone minifigure gave them flesh-colored heads and bespoke blasters. A variant Phase I clone has a jetpack for aerial operations.

As clone troopers pursue specialized missions, the Republic develops new helmets and armor for these units. Advanced Recon Force troopers are trained for stealth, with infrared cameras built into their helmets. A variant ARF trooper LEGO minifigure has white shoulder and forearm armor and green helmet markings.

Later in the Clone Wars, the Republic created improved Phase II armor with improved breath filter/annunciators. Minifigures' heads are plain black under the helmets. Camouflage is sometimes used on Phase II armor.

By the end of the Clone Wars, many clone commanders are veterans of years of battle and have formed close relationships with their Jedi generals. When Chancellor Palpatine issues Order 66 these friendships mean nothing: Obeying their insidious conditioning and training, clone commanders turn their guns on the Jedi they have served on so many missions.

NEW WEAPONS

For 2014, there was a new LEGO clone sidearm, with a translucent blue round plate at the muzzle—a feature also found on the first clone weapons.

Separatist Army

Although mass armies are illegal at the start of the Clone Wars, many wealthy commercial bodies use private forces to enforce payments and collect debts. These forces are pooled to create the Separatist war machine, under the command of Count Dooku. Consisting of huge numbers of deadly droids backed by attack vehicles, the Separatist army assaults Republic worlds from one side of the galaxy to the other.

Battlefield Droids

For years, the galaxy's wealthy, unsavory corporations enforced their will on customers with terrifying weaponized droids designed to collect debts, force labor settlements, and eliminate rivals. When those corporations join together to form the Separatist alliance, their droids become the muscle of the armies sent to invade Republic worlds, with Separatist factories working overtime to turn out new models.

Droideka

Destroyer droids, or droidekas, roll into battle, uncurl, and then deploy built-in blasters to deadly effect. So far, droideka models have battled clones in seven LEGO sets, with the droids looking more and more like their on-screen counterparts. Other Separatist units batter enemy ground forces and civilian targets on contested planets such as Kashyyyk and Ryloth.

Geonosians

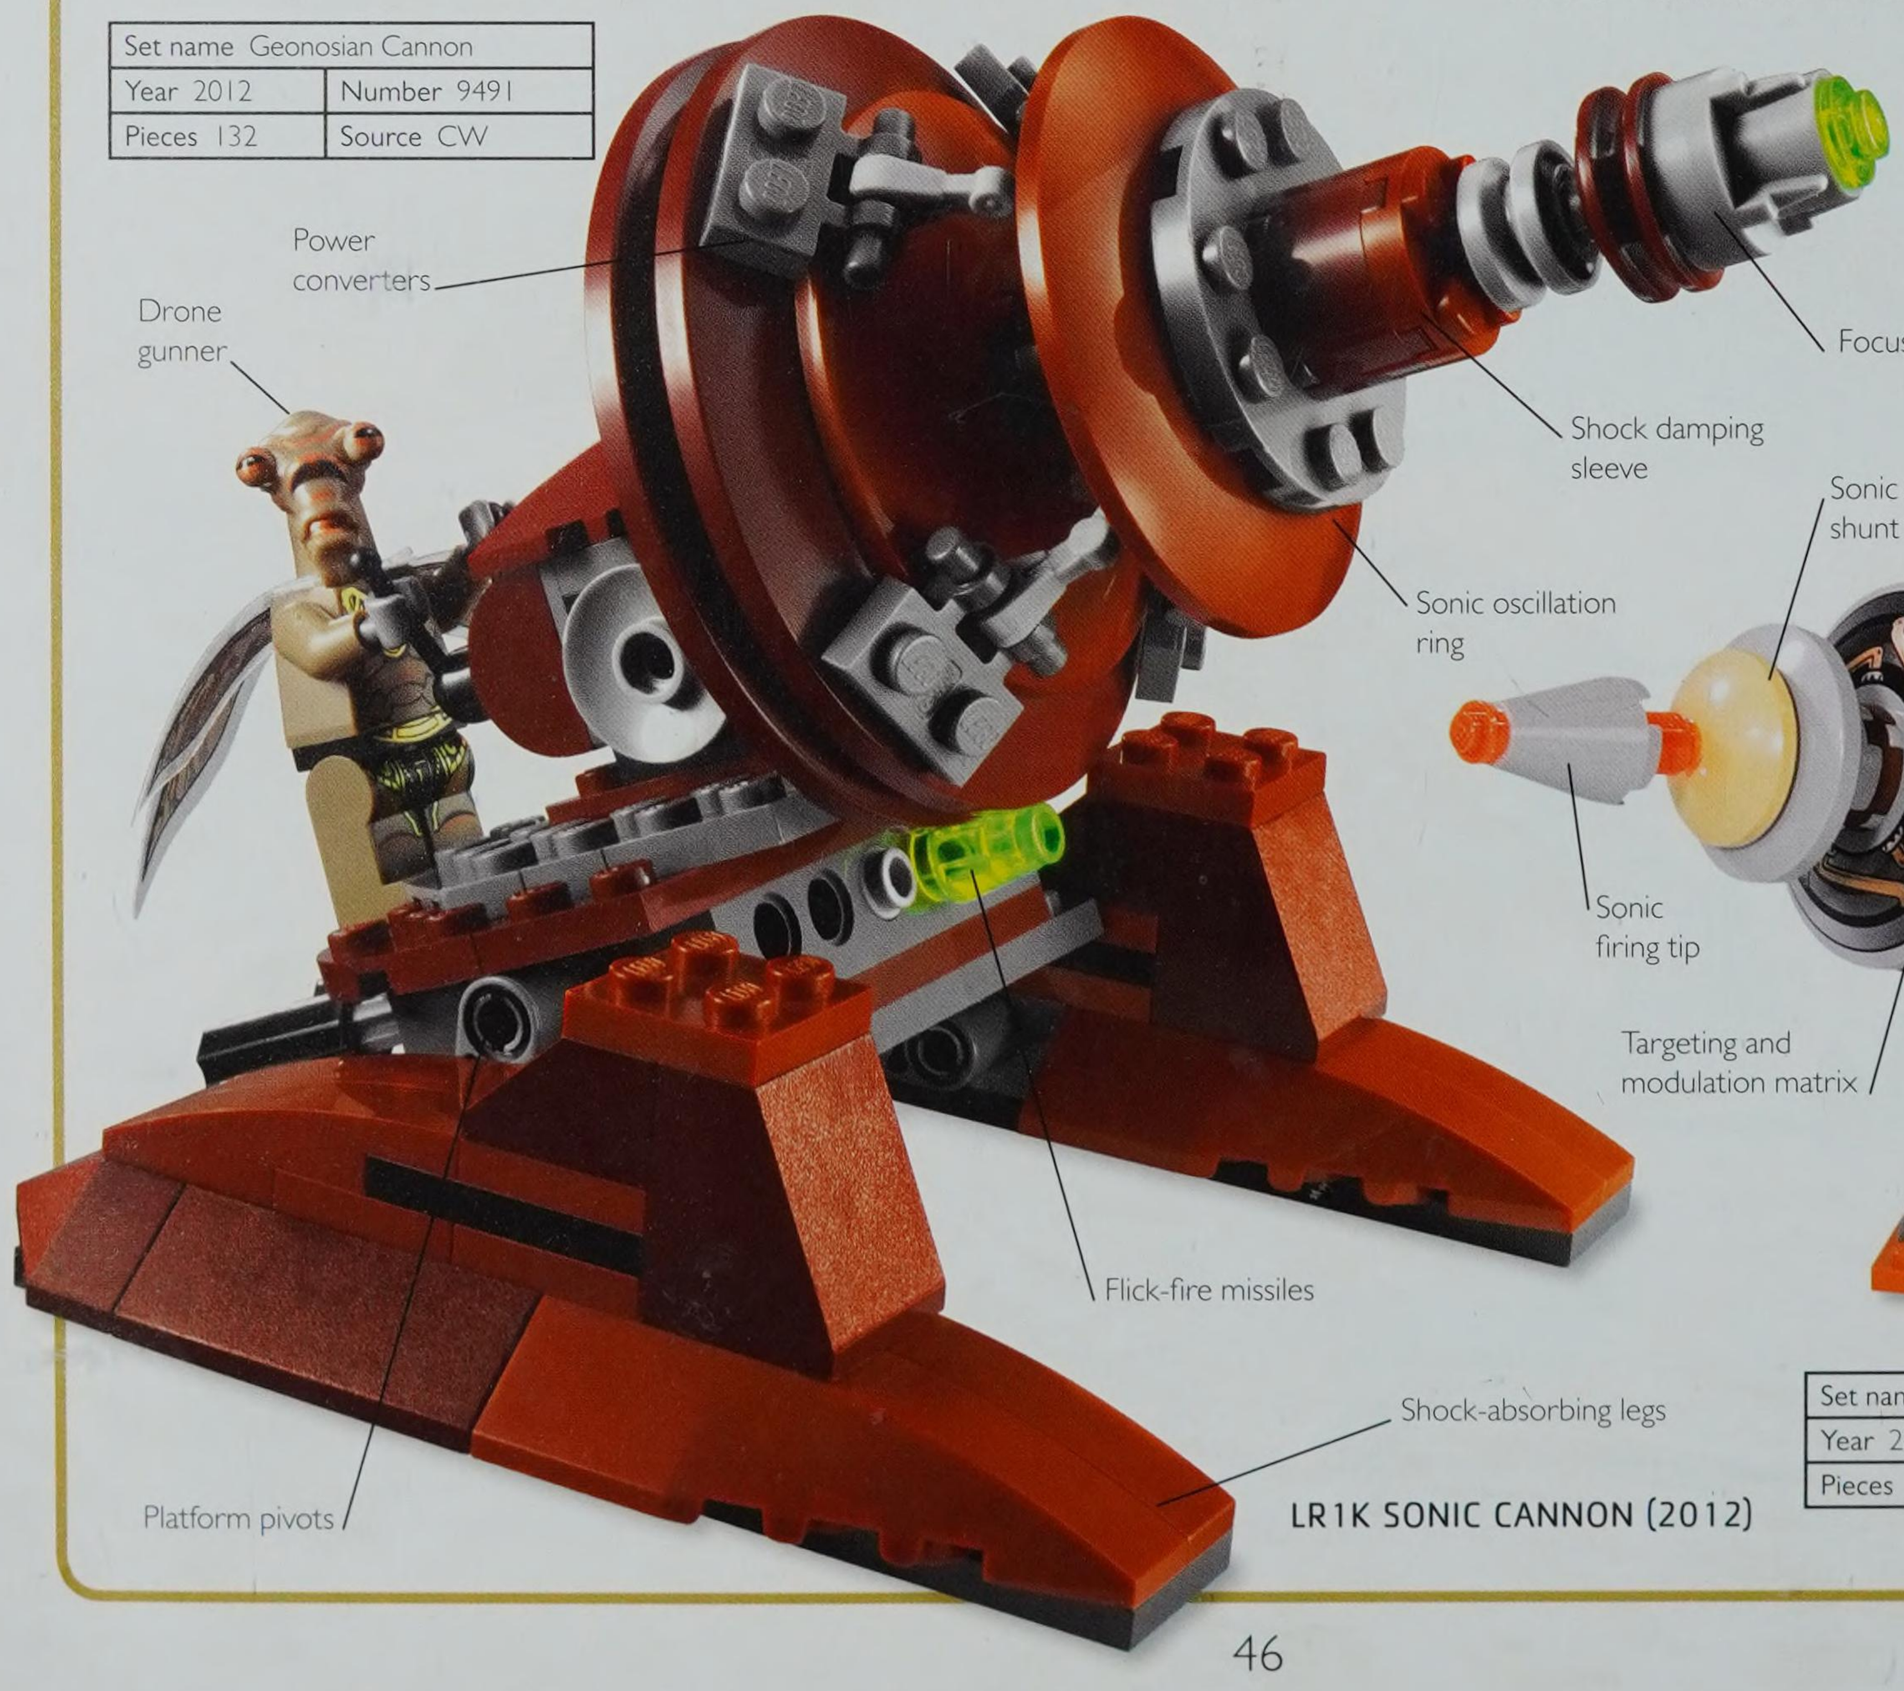

During the Clone Wars, the hive-dwelling Geonosians are notorious for their huge factories that endlessly churn out battle droids for the Separatist Army. A winged elite class rules over this savage, caste-based society, with wingless drones doing all the work. Geonosian soldiers carry exotic sonic weapons and fly twin-pronged fighter ships.

Geonosian Cannon

Geonosian soldiers deploy both handheld sonic blasters and platform-mounted sonic cannons, which fire balls of high-impact concussive energy. The LR1K cannon is a scaled-up artillery version of the handheld sonic blaster used by Geonosian drones belonging to the soldier caste. Desperate to save Padmé, Anakin falls to the dark side, leading Sidious's assault on the Jedi and crossing lightsabers with his old master Obi-Wan Kenobi on the lava planet Mustafar.

Palpatine's Arrest

Mace Windu assembles a party of Jedi to arrest Chancellor Palpatine, but the Sith Lord proves full of tricks and his office has many surprises: Will Mace fall victim to the hidden locker of dark-side weapons, or get flung out of the set's breakaway window? Anakin docks his airspeeder and rushes into the fray, where he must choose between his loyalty to the Jedi and his hunger to learn the dark side's secrets.

SITH ANAKIN

The strain of the Clone Wars shows on the face of Anakin's Episode III minifigure. His alternate face has yellow Sith eyes.

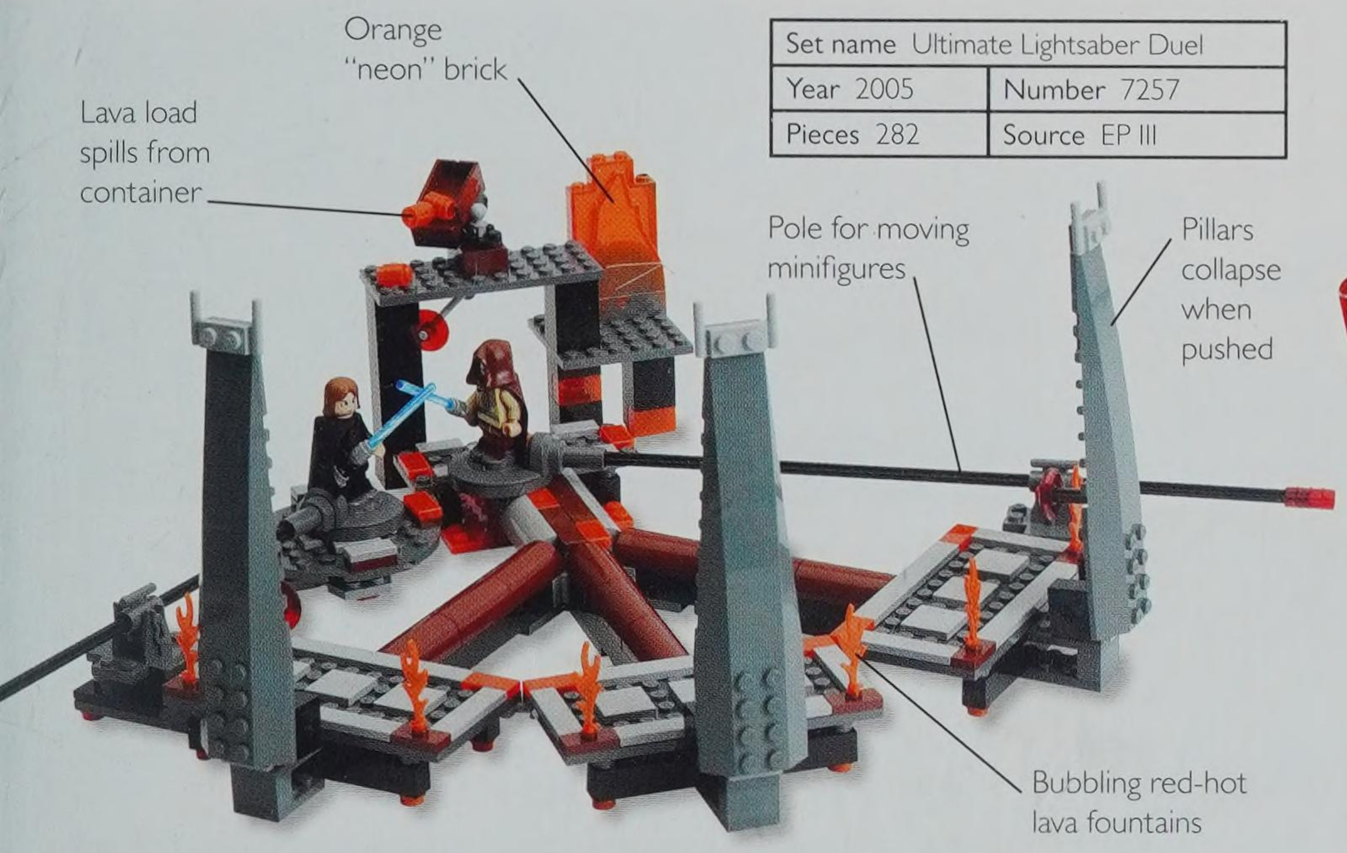

ALTERNATE FACE

Jedi Interceptor

After swearing allegiance to Darth Sidious, Anakin becomes his apprentice. He attacks the Jedi Temple, and says goodbye to Padmé. Boarding his Jedi interceptor, Anakin travels to Mustafar to eliminate the Separatist leaders. But Padmé and Obi-Wan follow him, leading to a fateful duel and tragic consequences. Duel on Mustafar

Teetering on service platforms above the red-hot lava of Mustafar, Obi-Wan fights his former Padawan, Anakin Skywalker, now recruited to the Sith and renamed Darth Vader. They are moved on long rods and their lightsabers glow. Meanwhile the pillars could come crashing down at any time!

MINING PLANET
Battling on Mustafar, Anakin and Obi-Wan seek safe places above the deadly lava. Their saber duel takes place atop confused mining droids and across repulsorlift platforms. These two come with Anakin's Jedi Interceptor (set 9494).

MINING DROID

LAVA PLATFORM

Obi-Wan

In the Jedi Temple, Obi-Wan discovers Anakin has betrayed the Jedi and pledged allegiance to the Sith. Heartbroken but determined to turn his old Padawan back to the light, Obi-Wan follows Anakin's Jedi Interceptor (set 9494) to Mustafar. This 2012 minifigure has an alternate, fierce face for displaying his determination to destroy this new threat to the galaxy.

Battle-Damaged Anakin

The duel on Mustafar leaves Anakin terribly burned, as shown in the printed detail on the front and back of his torso, made specifically for this minifigure. Left for dead by a distraught Obi-Wan, he is rescued by Palpatine, who begins Anakin's transformation into Darth Vader, forever trapped in a mask and armor.

Rehabilitation Center

After his battle with Obi-Wan Kenobi on Mustafar, Vader would have died had Palpatine not taken him to a secret medcenter on Coruscant. A medical droid stabilizes Vader's burned body and organs, then encases him in a life-supporting black suit of armor.

Wookiees

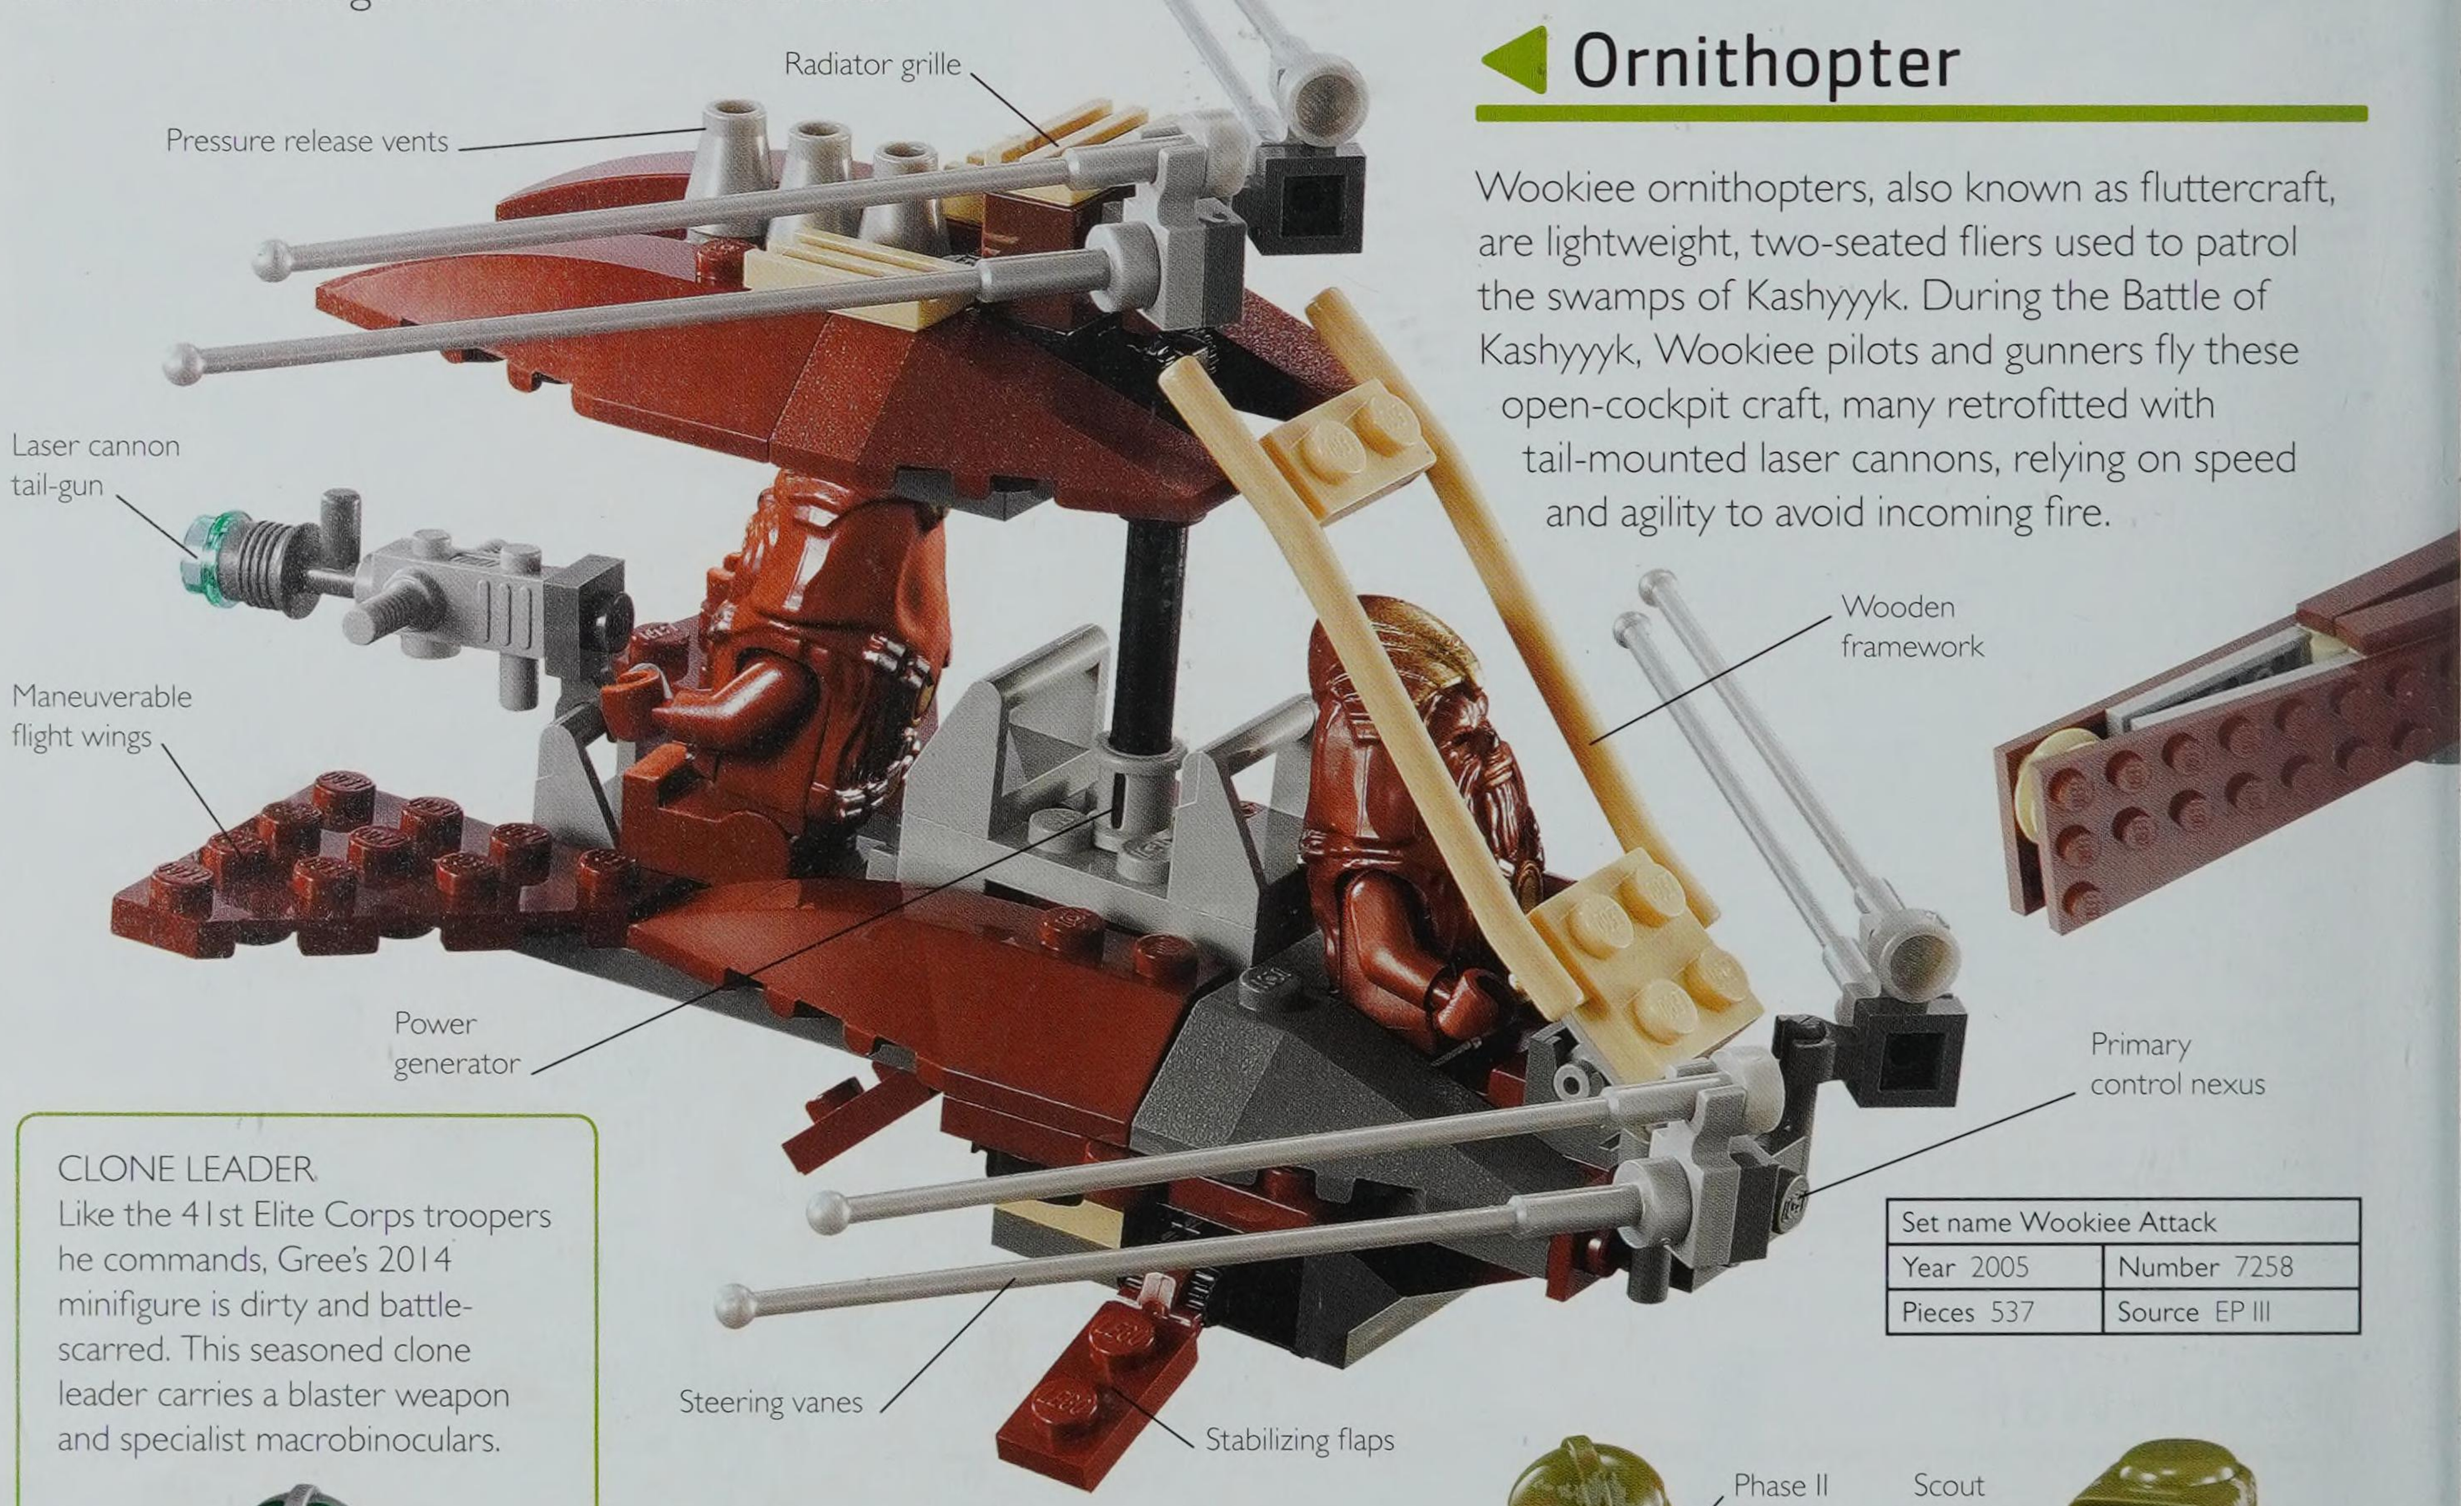

During the Clone Wars, an epic battle takes place on Kashyyyk, home planet of the Wookiees. Droid armies face fierce resistance from well-armed and proud Wookiee warriors, led by the chieftain Tarfful and including Chewbacca. Wookiees use traditional wood-framed vehicles, many of which are unarmed, but the Wookiees' knowledge of the swamps and forests of their planet gives them an advantage over the ruthless droids.

On Kashyyyk, Separatist battle droids, spider droids, and tank droids launch a massive attack. The Wookiees fight bravely in their ornithopters, catamarans, and other vehicles, supported by Republic clone troops led by Jedi generals.

Ornithopter

Wookiee ornithopters, also known as fluttercraft, are lightweight, two-seated fliers used to patrol the swamps of Kashyyyk. During the Battle of Kashyyyk, Wookiee pilots and gunners fly these open-cockpit craft, many retrofitted with tail-mounted laser cannons, relying on speed and agility to avoid incoming fire.

CLONE LEADER

Like the 41st Elite Corps troopers he commands, Gree's 2014 minifigure is dirty and battle-scarred. This seasoned clone leader carries a blaster weapon and specialist macrobinoculars.

CLONE COMMANDER GREE

Kashyyyk Troopers

Camouflaged to blend in on lush, jungle planets, the 41st Elite Corps come to the Wookiees' defense on Kashyyyk. The troopers' minifigure armor is printed to look scratched and battle-worn after lengthy duty in hostile terrains.

KASHYYYK CLONE TROOPER

41ST ELITE CORPS TROOPER

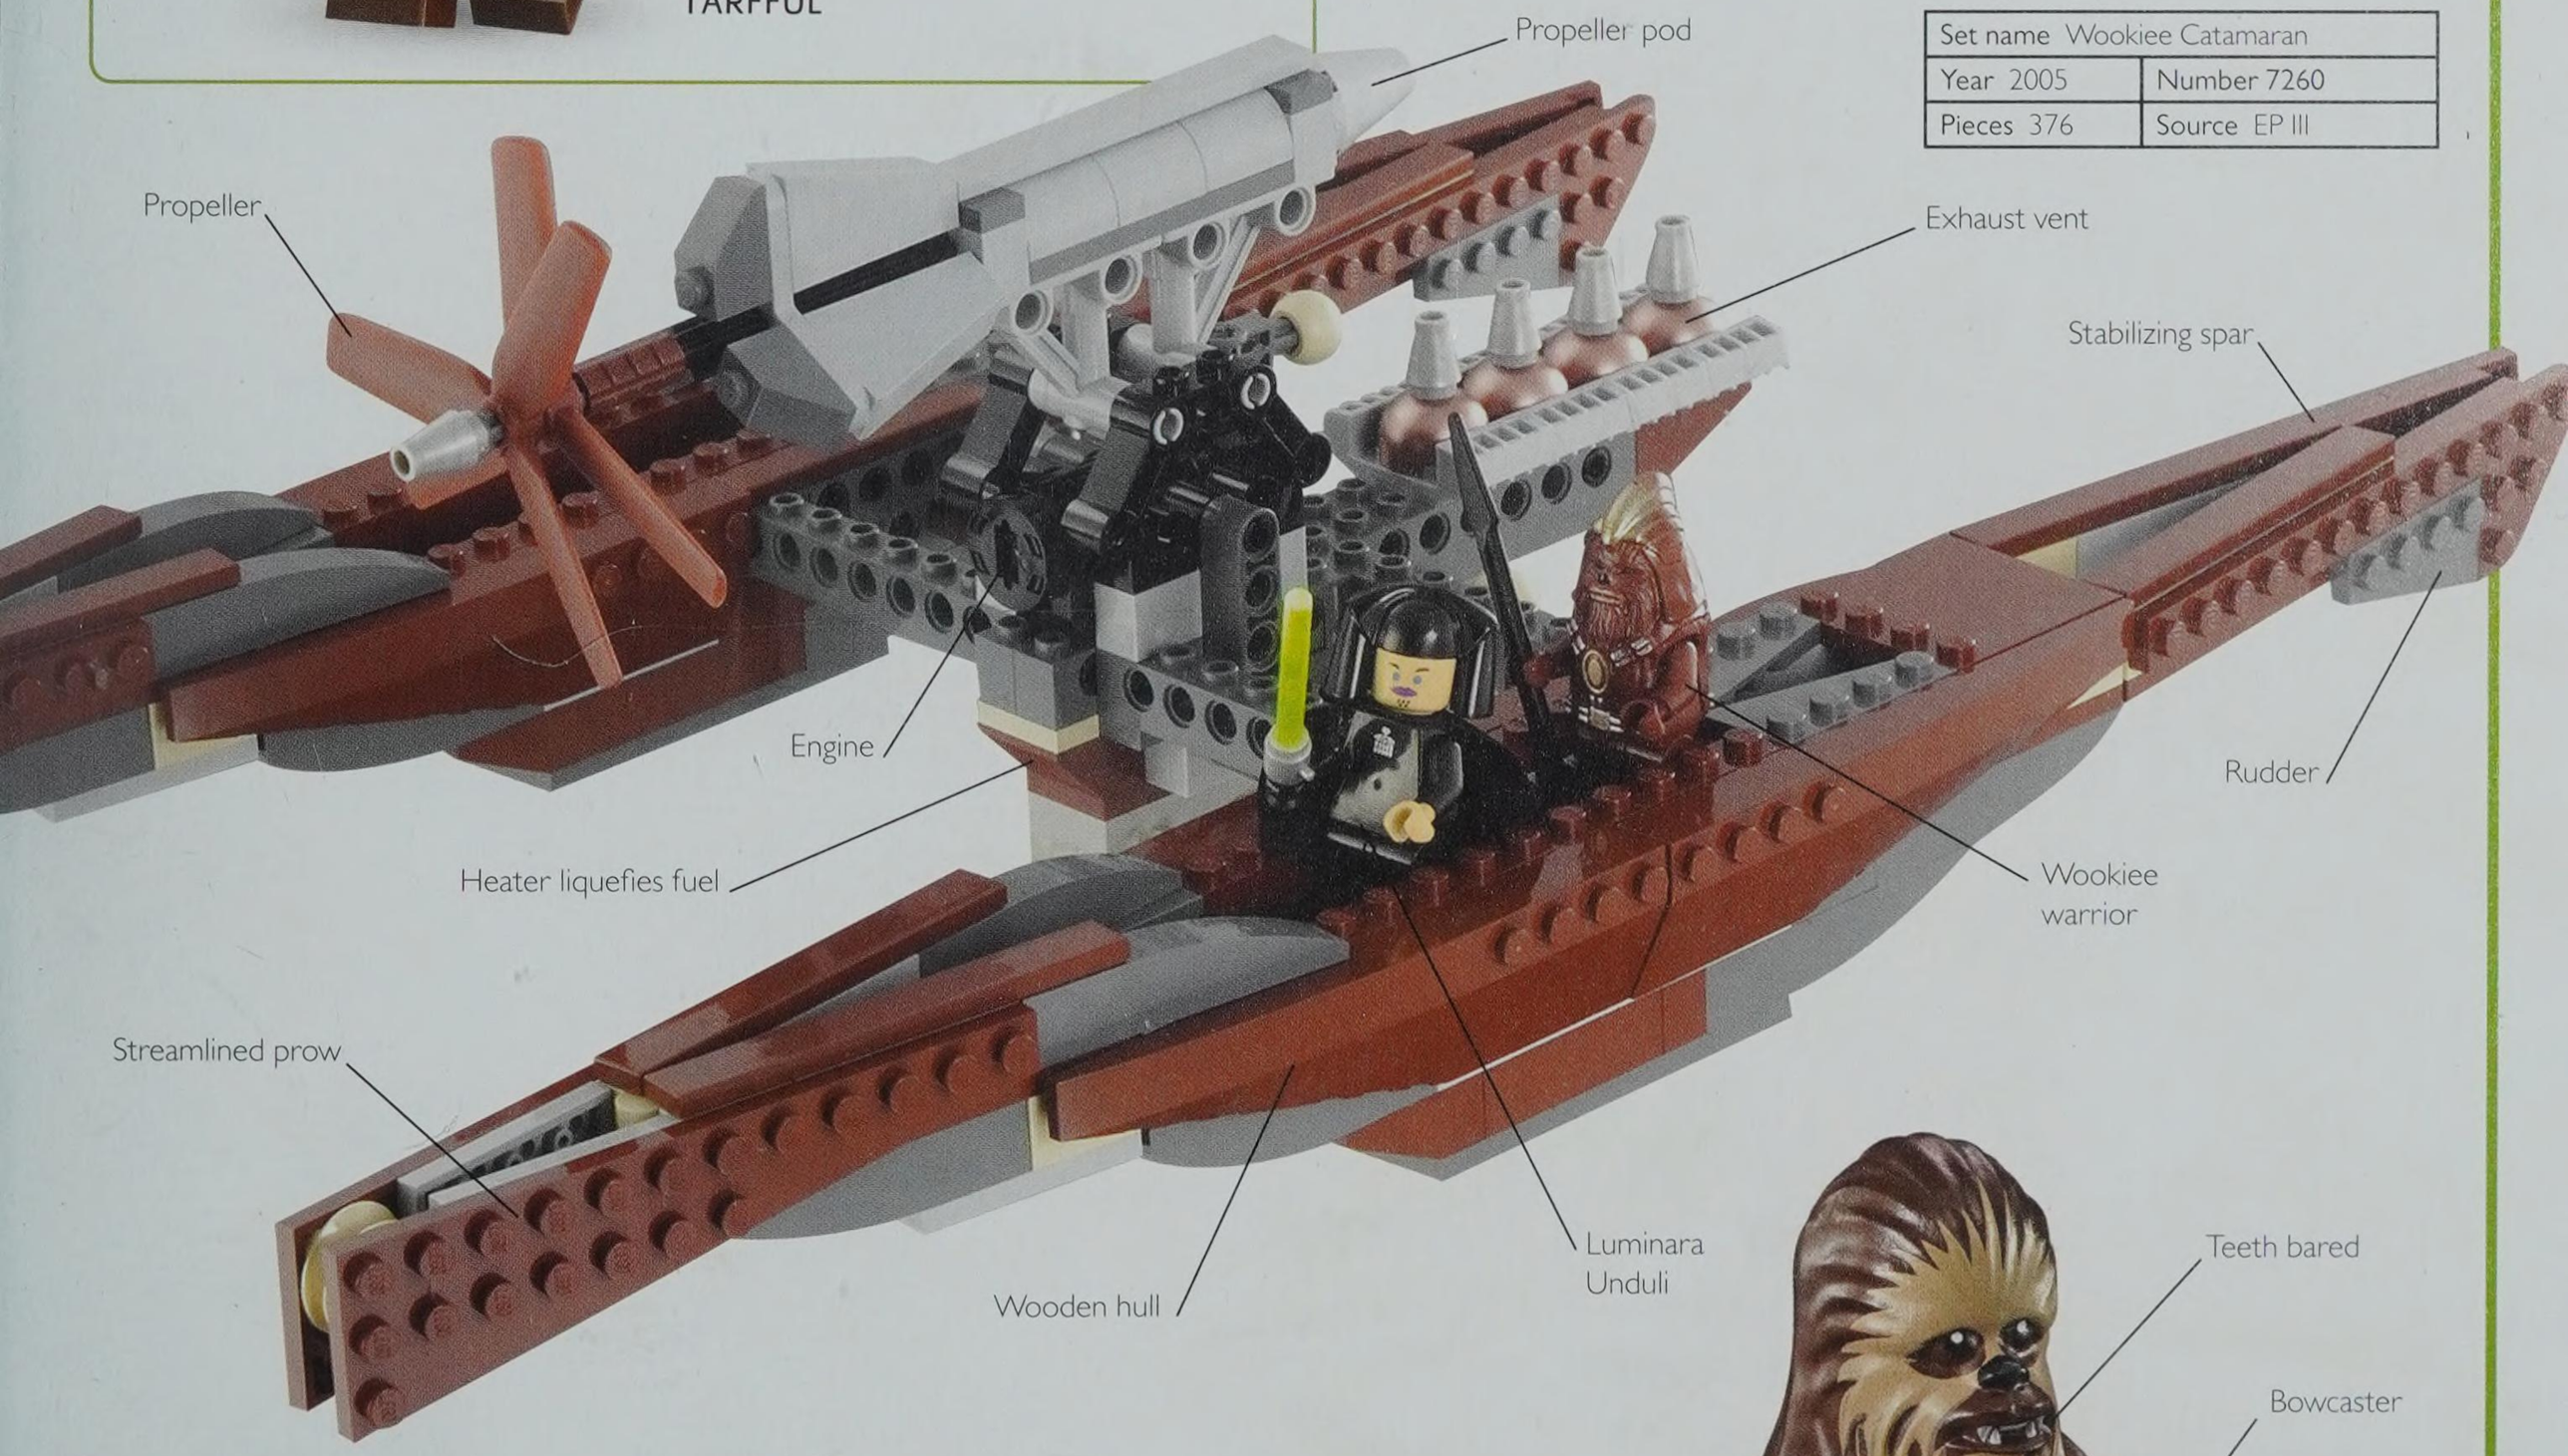

CHIEF TARFFUL

WOOKIEE WARRIOR
An old friend of Chewbacca's, the clan chieftain Tarfful fights alongside the Republic's clones on Kashyyyk. Then he helps rescue Yoda when the clone troopers mysteriously turn their guns on their Jedi generals. Tarfful fights with a long-barreled rifle and wears a bandolier displaying his clan emblem on a pectoral.

Catamaran

Slim, twin-hulled Wookiee catamarans skim over the waters of Kashyyyk at great speeds. During the Battle of Kashyyyk, Chewbacca joins forces with Yoda and Luminara Unduli on board a catamaran to make a raid on Separatist lines. Usually unarmed, this retrofitted catamaran features a centrally mounted heavy missile cannon and several bombs (dropped from each hull). Catamarans are lifted by repulsors and propelled by jet engines or, as here, propeller pods.

CHEWBACCA (REDDISH-BROWN)

BRICK FACTS

Reddish-brown Chewbacca appears in several Imperial-era sets: Death Star (set 10188), Millennium Falcon (set 4504 and the Ultimate Collector set 10179) and X-Wing Fighter (set 6212). A brown Chewbacca appears in Imperial AT-ST (set 7127), Millennium Falcon (set 7190), and the minifigure pack, Star Wars #3 (set 3342).

Chewbacca

Small and skinny for a Wookiee, Chewbacca fights against the Separatists' battle droids on Kashyyyk, firing energy bolts from his bowcaster. This 2014 version of Chewie's minifigure has a new mold, with visible teeth and new details in his multicolored fur and eyes. His bowcaster is now black. He's found in Droid Gunship (set 75042).

Chapter 2: Original Trilogy & Expanded Universe

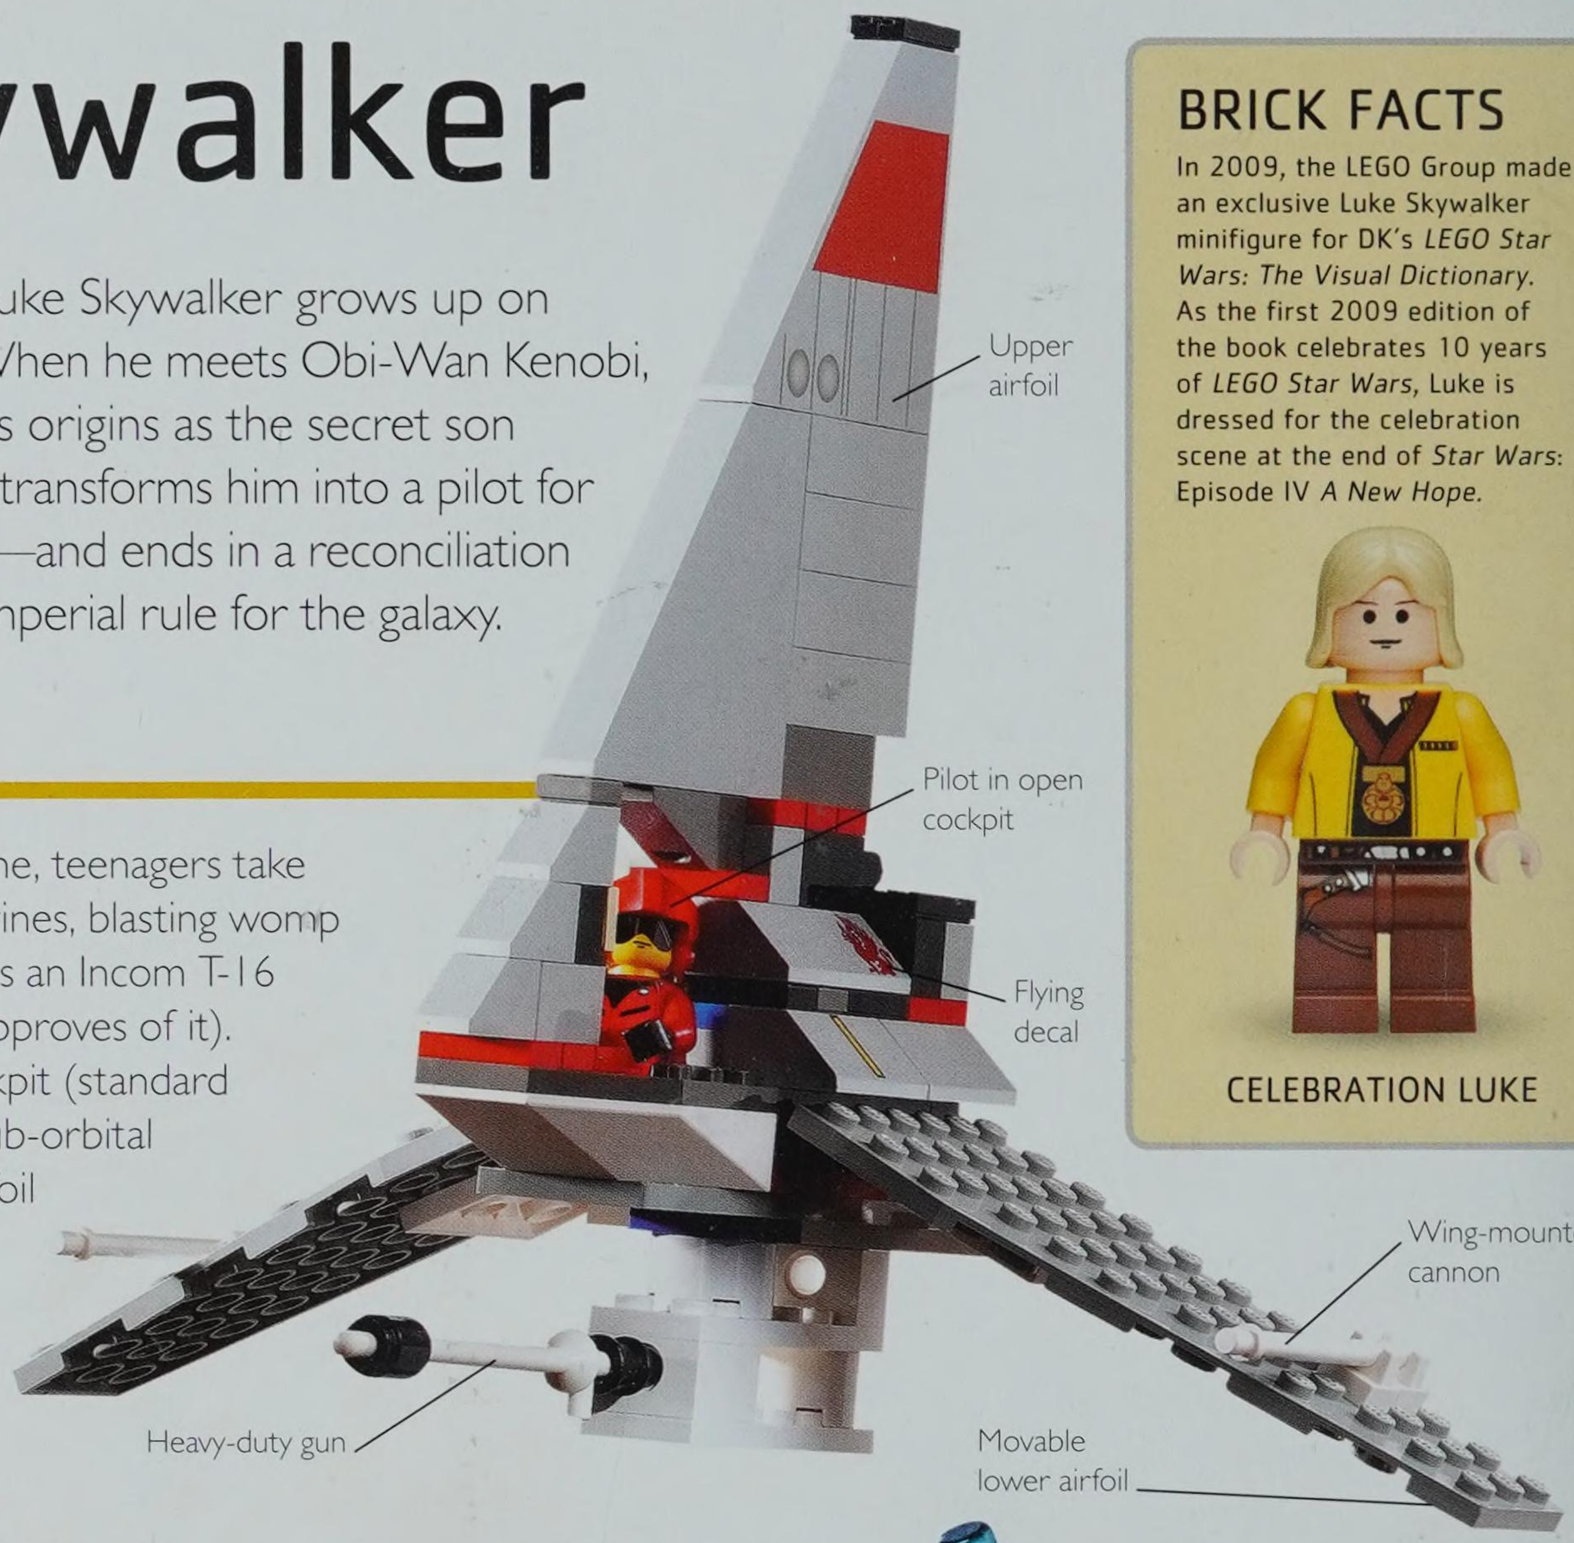

Luke Skywalker

Yearning for adventure, farm boy Luke Skywalker grows up on a remote planet named Tatooine. When he meets Obi-Wan Kenobi, Luke begins to learn the truth of his origins as the secret son of Anakin Skywalker. Luke's journey transforms him into a pilot for the Rebel Alliance and a Jedi Knight—and ends in a reconciliation with his father and freedom from Imperial rule for the galaxy.

T-16 Skyhopper

With the demise of Podracing on Tatooine, teenagers take to racing skyhoppers through narrow ravines, blasting womp rats with front-mounted rifles. Luke owns an Incom T-16 skyhopper (though his Uncle Owen disapproves of it). This variant model features an open cockpit (standard models feature a pressurized cabin for sub-orbital travel). A compartment in the upper airfoil holds the electrobinoculars and blaster included with the set.

LUKE (CLOUD CITY)

REBEL PILOT

On Hoth, Luke flies a snowspeeder as Rogue Leader. This minifigure, from the 2013 set, Battle of Hoth (set 75014), has an alternate face showing Luke with his visor raised.

JEDI KNIGHT
Luke survives his encounter with Vader, but needs a mechanical hand to replace the one he lost in their duel. Wearing the plain garb of a Jedi, he travels to the Forest Moon of Endor, before his final confrontation with Darth Vader.

LUKE (EWOK VILLAGE)

Sandcrawler

On Tatooine, Jawas patrol the deserts and wastelands in large sandcrawlers in search of salvage from spaceship crashes. Sandcrawlers are forgotten relics from the days when Tatooine was a mining colony. Jawas have repurposed them to round up stray droids, old vehicles, and scrap metal or minerals that can be used or sold. Each sandcrawler is home to an entire clan of Jawas, and serves as transport, workshop, traveling store—and protection from desert predators or rampaging Sand People.

Jedi in Hiding

After swearing allegiance to the Sith, Anakin Skywalker helps Darth Sidious hunt down the Jedi and turn the Republic into the Galactic Empire. The few Jedi who survive become refugees, hoping to avoid detection by Darth Vader and his Emperor. Obi-Wan Kenobi gives the infant Luke Skywalker to the Lars family on Tatooine and dwells in the desert, while Yoda hides on a little-known planet in the Outer Rim.

Yoda's Hut

Yoda survives the Great Jedi Purge at the end of the Clone Wars to live in exile on Dagobah. He lands on the planet in an escape pod, which he makes into a hut. Yoda's lifestyle on the swamp planet is frugal: his dwelling is furnished with a simple bed, table, cooking pot, and barrels.

YODA (WHITE HAIR)

Eight hundred years of life have taught Yoda patience, and changed his appearance. This is the third incarnation of Yoda—the updated minifigure is based on the Star Wars: Clone Wars TV series and features a new white hair pattern on the back of his head.

BEN KENOBI (JEDI MASTER)

Obi-Wan's exile comes to an end when he receives a distress call from Princess Leia. He puts on his Jedi cloak and hood to lead Luke on a rescue mission.

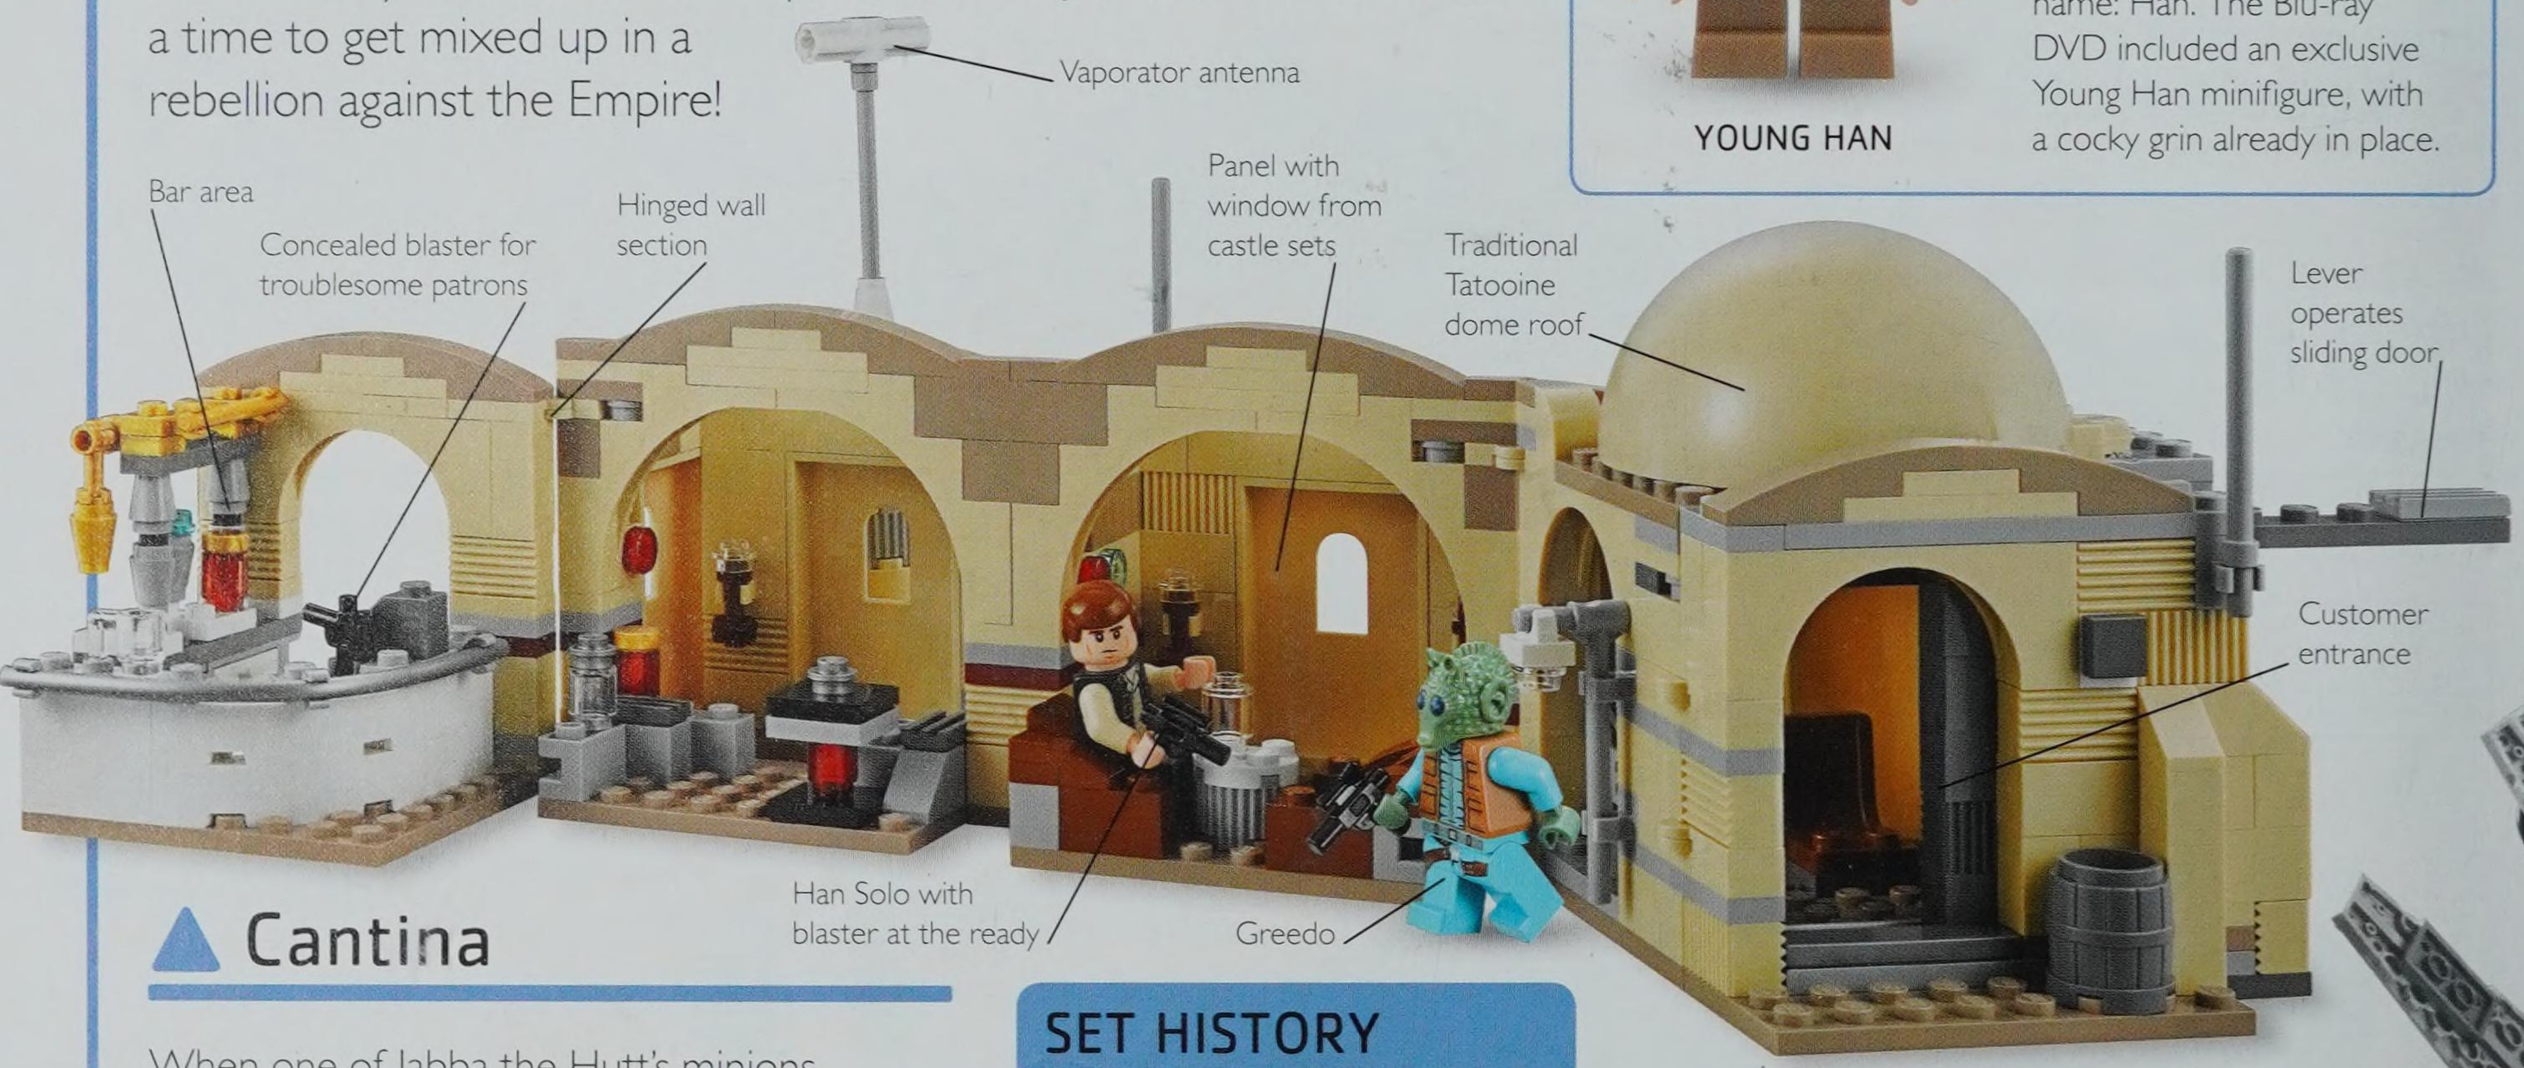

BEN KENOBI (TATOOINE)

In exile on Tatooine, Obi-Wan becomes known as "Ben Kenobi". He keeps a quiet watch over Luke, Anakin's son, waiting for the day he can teach him about the Force.

Han Solo and Chewbacca

He's a rogue and a scoundrel. Worst of all, according to Princess Leia, he's scruffy-looking. But Han Solo and copilot Chewbacca fly one of the fastest ships in the galaxy. The Millennium Falcon is also scruffy-looking, but, according to Solo, it "made the Kessel Run in less than 12 parsecs." The ship needs to be smart and fast: Solo has a bounty on his head for unpaid debts to Jabba the Hutt. What a time to get mixed up in a rebellion against the Empire!

YOUNG HAN

WHO'S IAN?
The 2011 animated LEGO feature The Padawan Menace introduced Ian, a fast-talking orphan who poses as a Jedi youngling before revealing his real name: Han. The Blu-ray DVD included an exclusive Young Han minifigure, with a cocky grin already in place.

HAN SOLO (HOTH)

CELEBRATION HAN

Millennium Falcon

According to its captain, Han Solo, the Millennium Falcon "may not look like much, but she's got it where it counts." It's fast and well-equipped, though prone to malfunctions. Han and its previous captains have tinkered with its systems over the years, adding Imperial military-grade armor, quad laser cannons, an outsized sensor dish, and many other customized features—all of which require frequent repairs!

Engines

Moving at sublight speed, the Falcon relies on two heavily modified Girodyne SRB42 engines that emit glowing blue exhaust gases when fired up. Sublight drives propel spaceships within star systems or far enough away from planets so they can safely jump to hyperspace.

Emperor Palpatine

Feared Sith Lord Emperor Palpatine rules as dictator over the most oppressive regime the galaxy has ever known. Rarely seen, even by his own officers, the Emperor wears a black hood over a face that has been deformed by dark side energies. Never content with the extent of his rule, Emperor Palpatine's focus now is on replacing his apprentice, Darth Vader, with Vader's own son, the powerful Jedi Luke Skywalker.

Sith Lord

Emperor Palpatine's face is distorted by dark side energies and his sulphurous eyes betray his inner anger. Palpatine wears a black robe to hide his face and often walks with a cane, not because he needs it, but because he wishes to pretend that he is weak.

BRICK FACTS

The Imperial Star Destroyer (set 6211), released in 2006, included a room below decks where Vader communicates with a hologram of Emperor Palpatine—achieved by a sticker on a translucent brick.

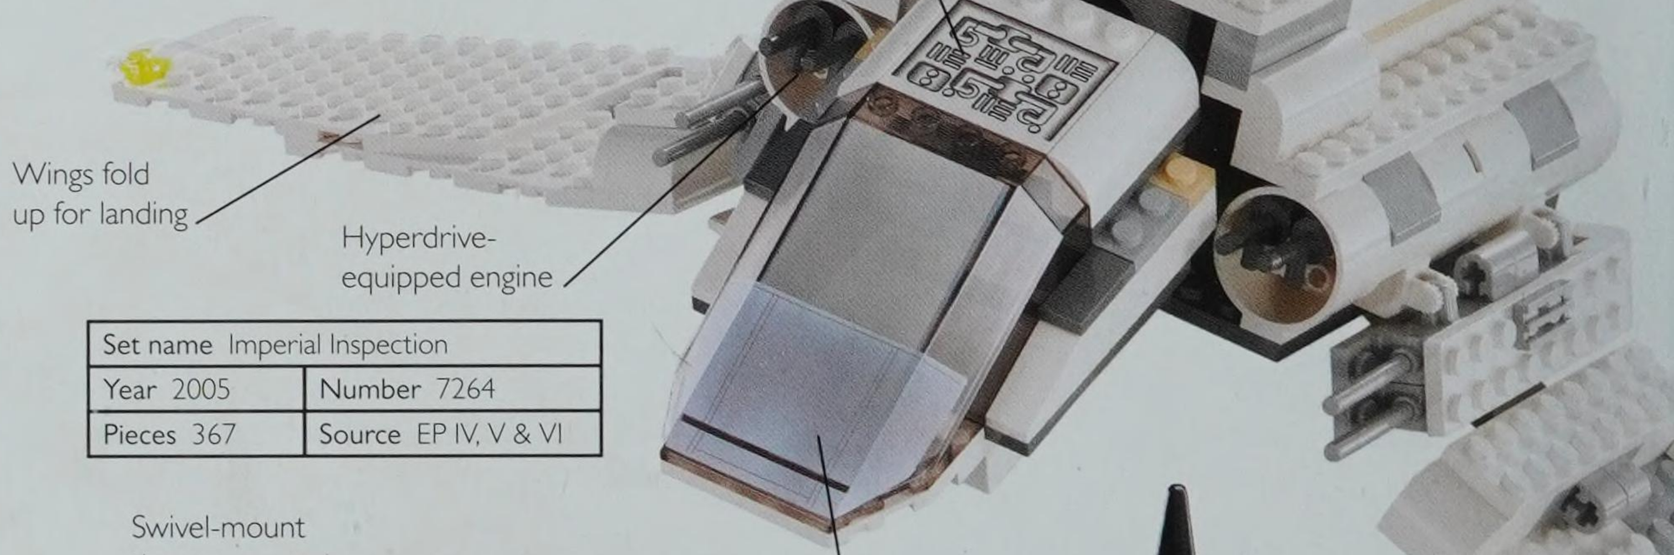

Imperial Shuttle

The Lambda-class shuttle is a multi-purpose transport vessel used throughout the Imperial fleet. These unusually elegant vessels also carry the Imperial elite, including Emperor Palpatine and Darth Vader. IMPERIAL ROYAL GUARD

Darth Vader

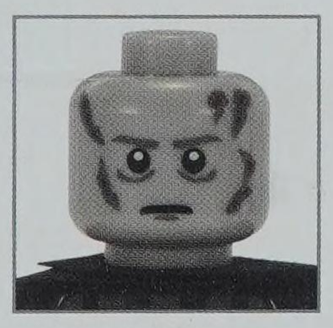

Anakin Skywalker was once one of the most powerful and celebrated members of the Jedi Order, but fell to the dark side and became Darth Vader, Emperor Palpatine's Sith apprentice. Horribly wounded on Mustafar, Vader now lives encased in a terrifying breath mask and black armor, and travels the Empire to enforce his Master's dark will.

Darth Vader

Darth Vader with cloak and scarred face appears in Cloud City (set 10123), Final Duel I (set 7200), TIE Fighter & Y-Wing (set 7150), and the Sith Minifigure Pack (set 3340). The Sith Lord gained more detailed chest controls and a utility belt in Darth Vader's TIE Fighter (set 8017) and Death Star (set 10188.) Beneath the helmet, Anakin's ravaged face lacks eyebrows in Imperial Inspection (set 7264) and Star Destroyer (set 6211).

DARTH VADER (2008)

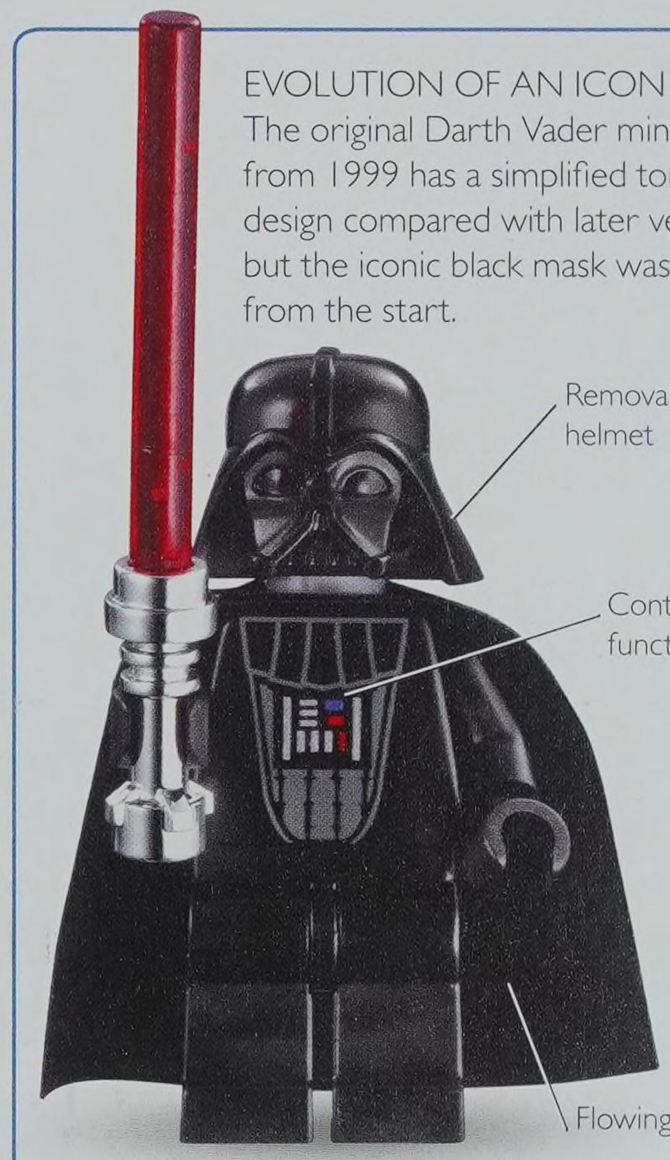

WHITE EYES

Later in 2008, the LEGO Group added white pupils to the eyes on Vader's hidden face piece—adding a bit more humanity to the man in the infamous mask.

BRICK FACTS

The TIE Fighter (set 7263), released in 2005, included the first Vader with a light-up lightsaber. The Dark Lord's hand and saber are a single piece; push down on Vader's helmet to ignite his Sith saber.

DARTH VADER (1999)

EVOLUTION OF AN ICON
The original Darth Vader minifigure from 1999 has a simplified torso design compared with later versions, but the iconic black mask was there from the start.

Two Death Stars in One

The Death Star set combines aspects of the first and second Death Stars. Luke, for example, appears three times: in stormtrooper uniform to rescue Leia, in his regular outfit to swing across the air shaft, and as a Jedi Knight to battle Darth Vader.

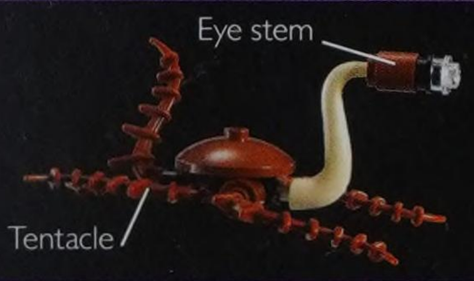

DETENTION CELL

Minifigures

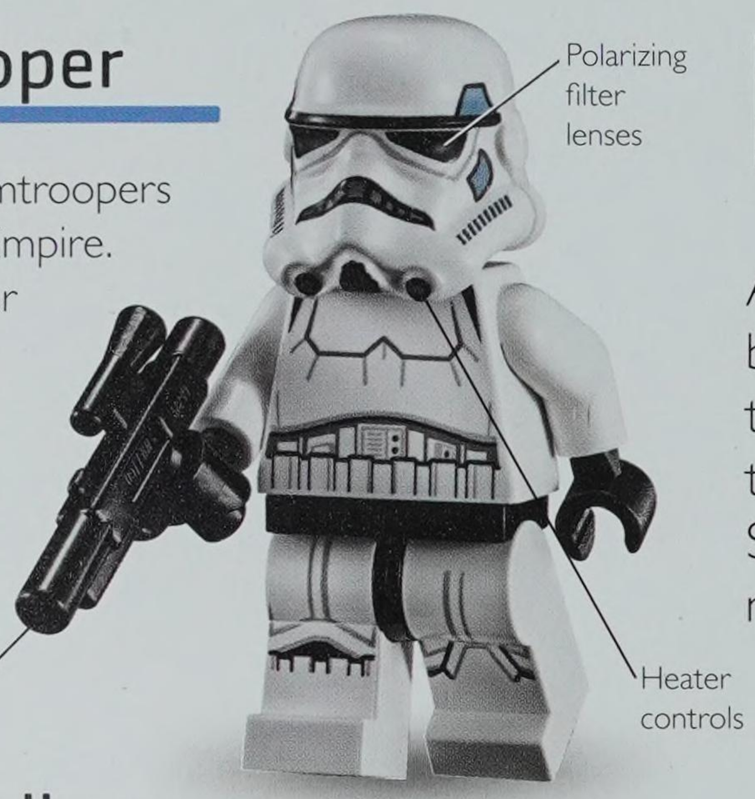

The set features several unique minifigures, including Luke and Han in stormtrooper disguise, a white assassin droid, and Emperor Palpatine with a supremely grotesque face. Also, Darth Vader features a new torso design.

Imperial Army

At the end of the Clone Wars, the Galactic Republic becomes an Empire and its military resources now serve the new regime. Clone troopers become stormtroopers, their ranks made up of clones and, now, human recruits. Specialist stormtroopers are trained for a variety of military roles on land and in space.

Nameless, faceless stormtroopers are utterly loyal to the Empire. Minifigures appear either with or without mouth grilles (dotted mouths), and with black, yellow, or flesh-colored heads under their helmets.

TIE FIGHTER PILOT

Imperial fighter pilots are a specially trained, elite flying corps.

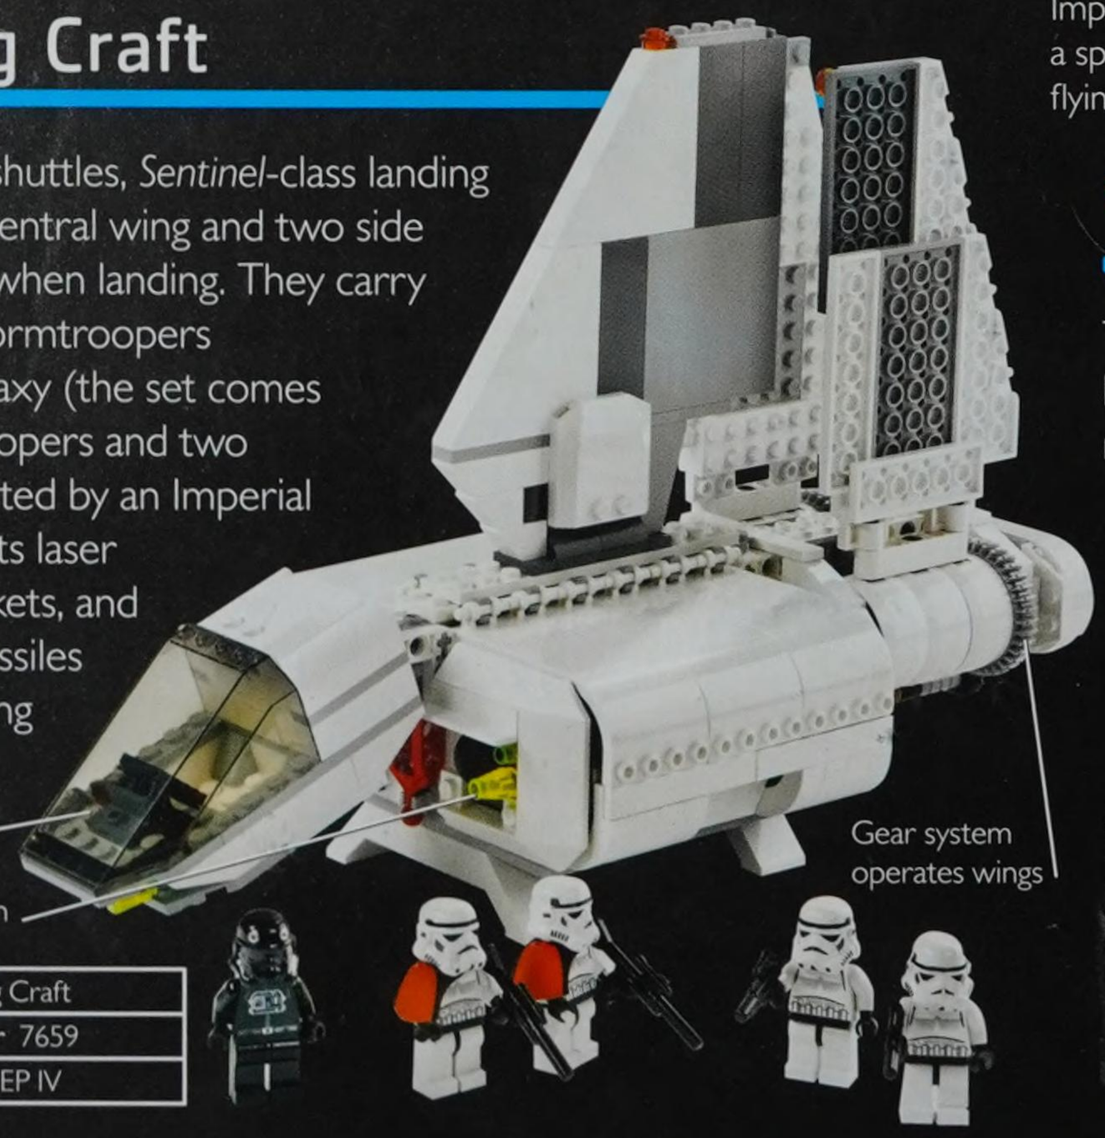

R5-J2

An Imperial astromech, R5-J2 boasts a redesigned, movie-accurate head mold.

Landing Craft

Like Lambda-class shuttles, Sentinel-class landing craft have a fixed central wing and two side wings that fold up when landing. They carry detachments of stormtroopers throughout the galaxy (the set comes with two stormtroopers and two sandtroopers). Piloted by an Imperial pilot, the ship boasts laser cannons, firing rockets, and four concussion missiles (released by pressing bricks in the rear).

DROID BRAIN

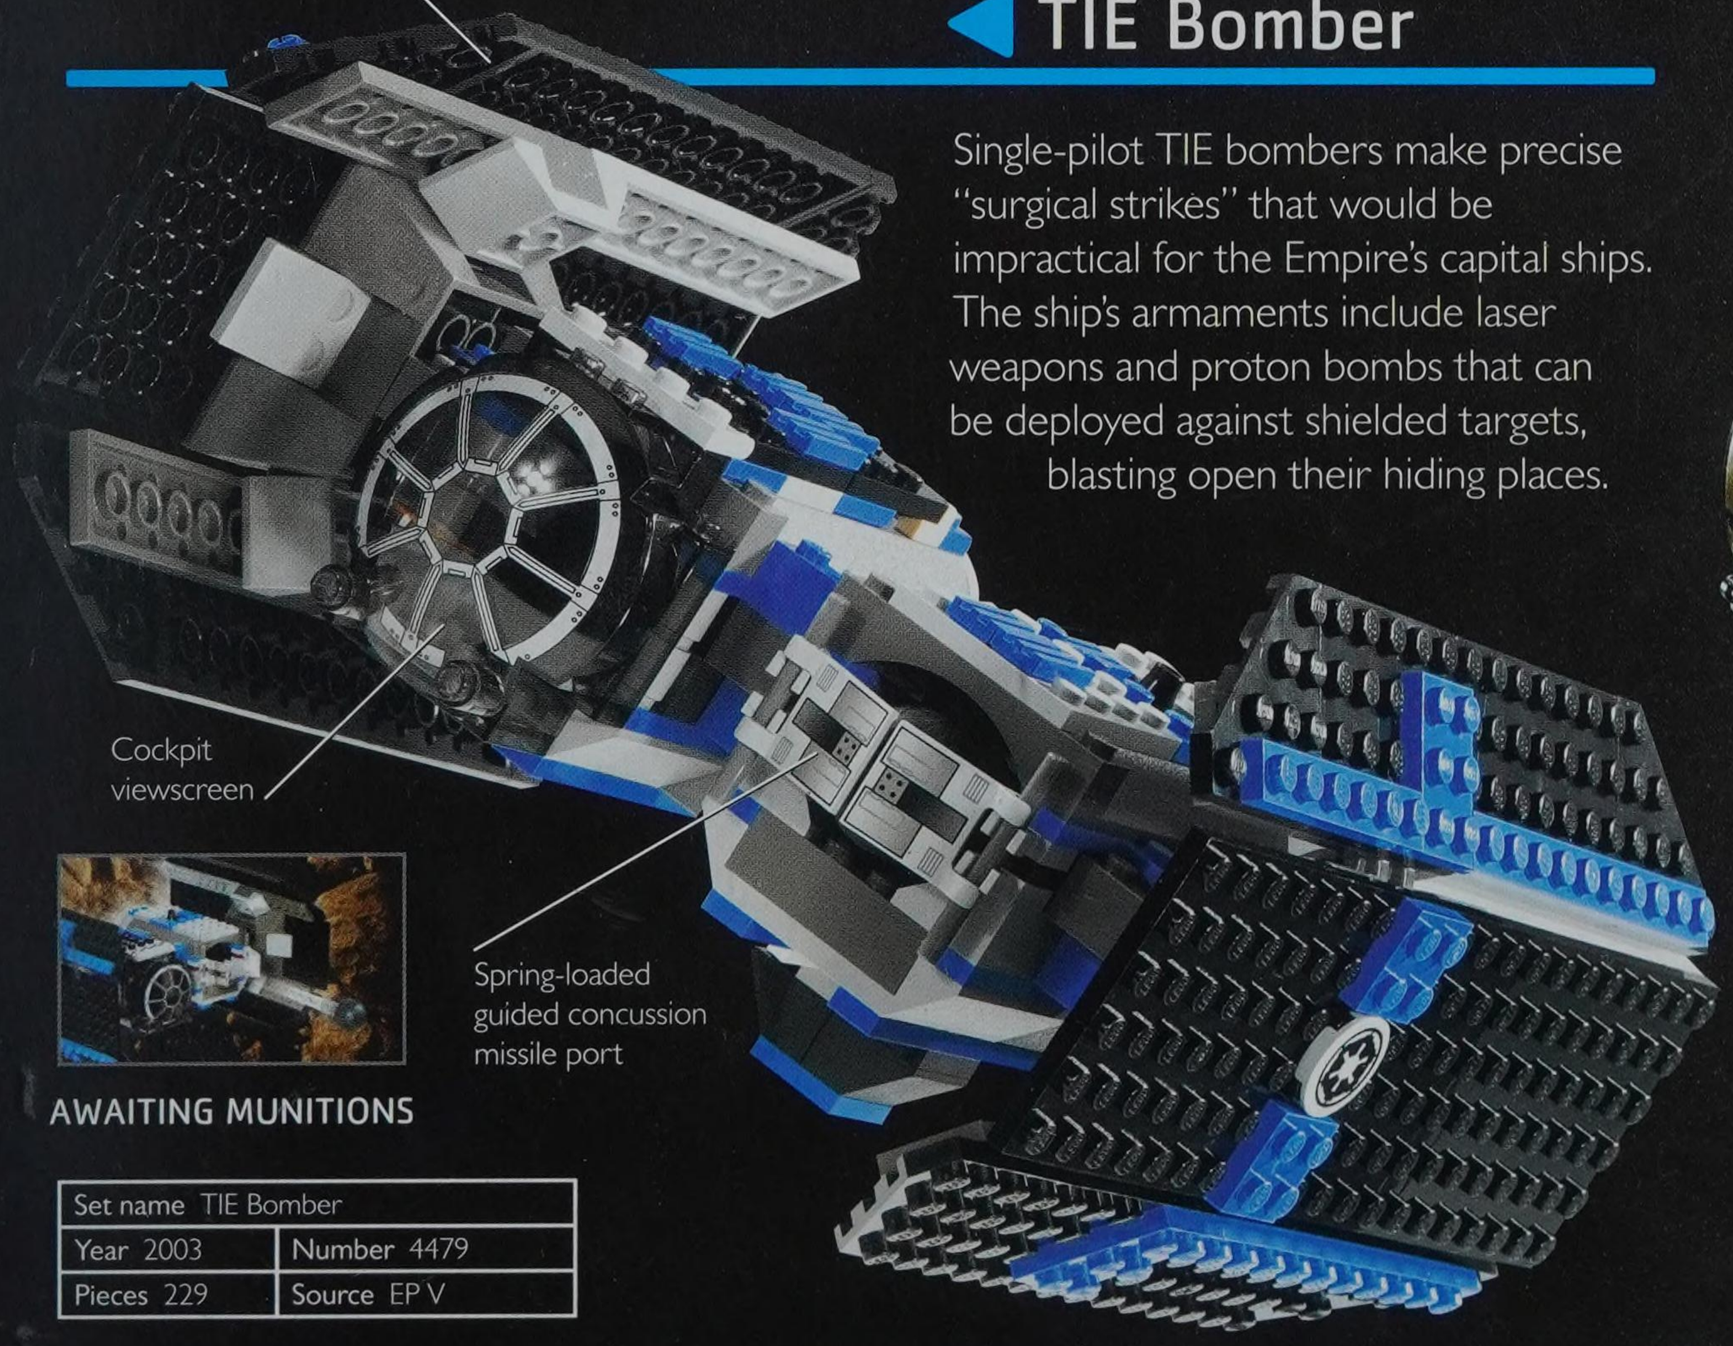

TIE-D

Shortly after the Battle of Endor, the Empire developed prototype pilotless fighters with programmable droid brains. The droid brain minifigure can be removed from the pod casing.

TIE Bomber

Single-pilot TIE bombers make precise "surgical strikes" that would be impractical for the Empire's capital ships. The ship's armaments include laser weapons and proton bombs that can be deployed against shielded targets, blasting open their hiding places.

Dropship

Dropships are lightly armed troop transports. A shadowtrooper sits in the cockpit and the detachable troop platform seats four stormtroopers (the set has three).

Star Destroyer

Dagger-shaped Star Destroyers are the most feared symbol of Imperial might, armed with deadly firepower and powerful scanner and tractor-beam arrays. The Republic develops Victory-class Star Destroyers as capital ships in the final years of the Clone Wars, and the Emperor expands the fleet with new Imperial-class Star Destroyers, employed to crush and subdue worlds.

Meditation Chamber

On long space voyages, Darth Vader sits in his meditation chamber, or hyperbaric pod. In the high-pressure air mix within the chamber, Vader can remove his helmet (using a lifting mechanism) to reveal his horribly scarred face and head.

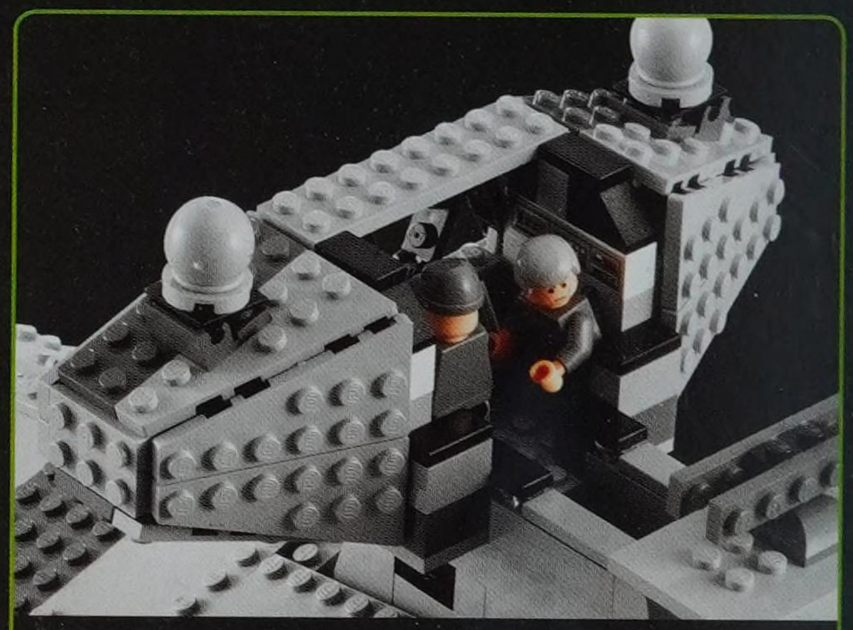

Escape Pod

The ship contains a life-support escape pod for emergency evacuations. Escape pods contain food and oxygen, as well as flares, a porta-shelter, and survival suits for passengers.

Forward Systems

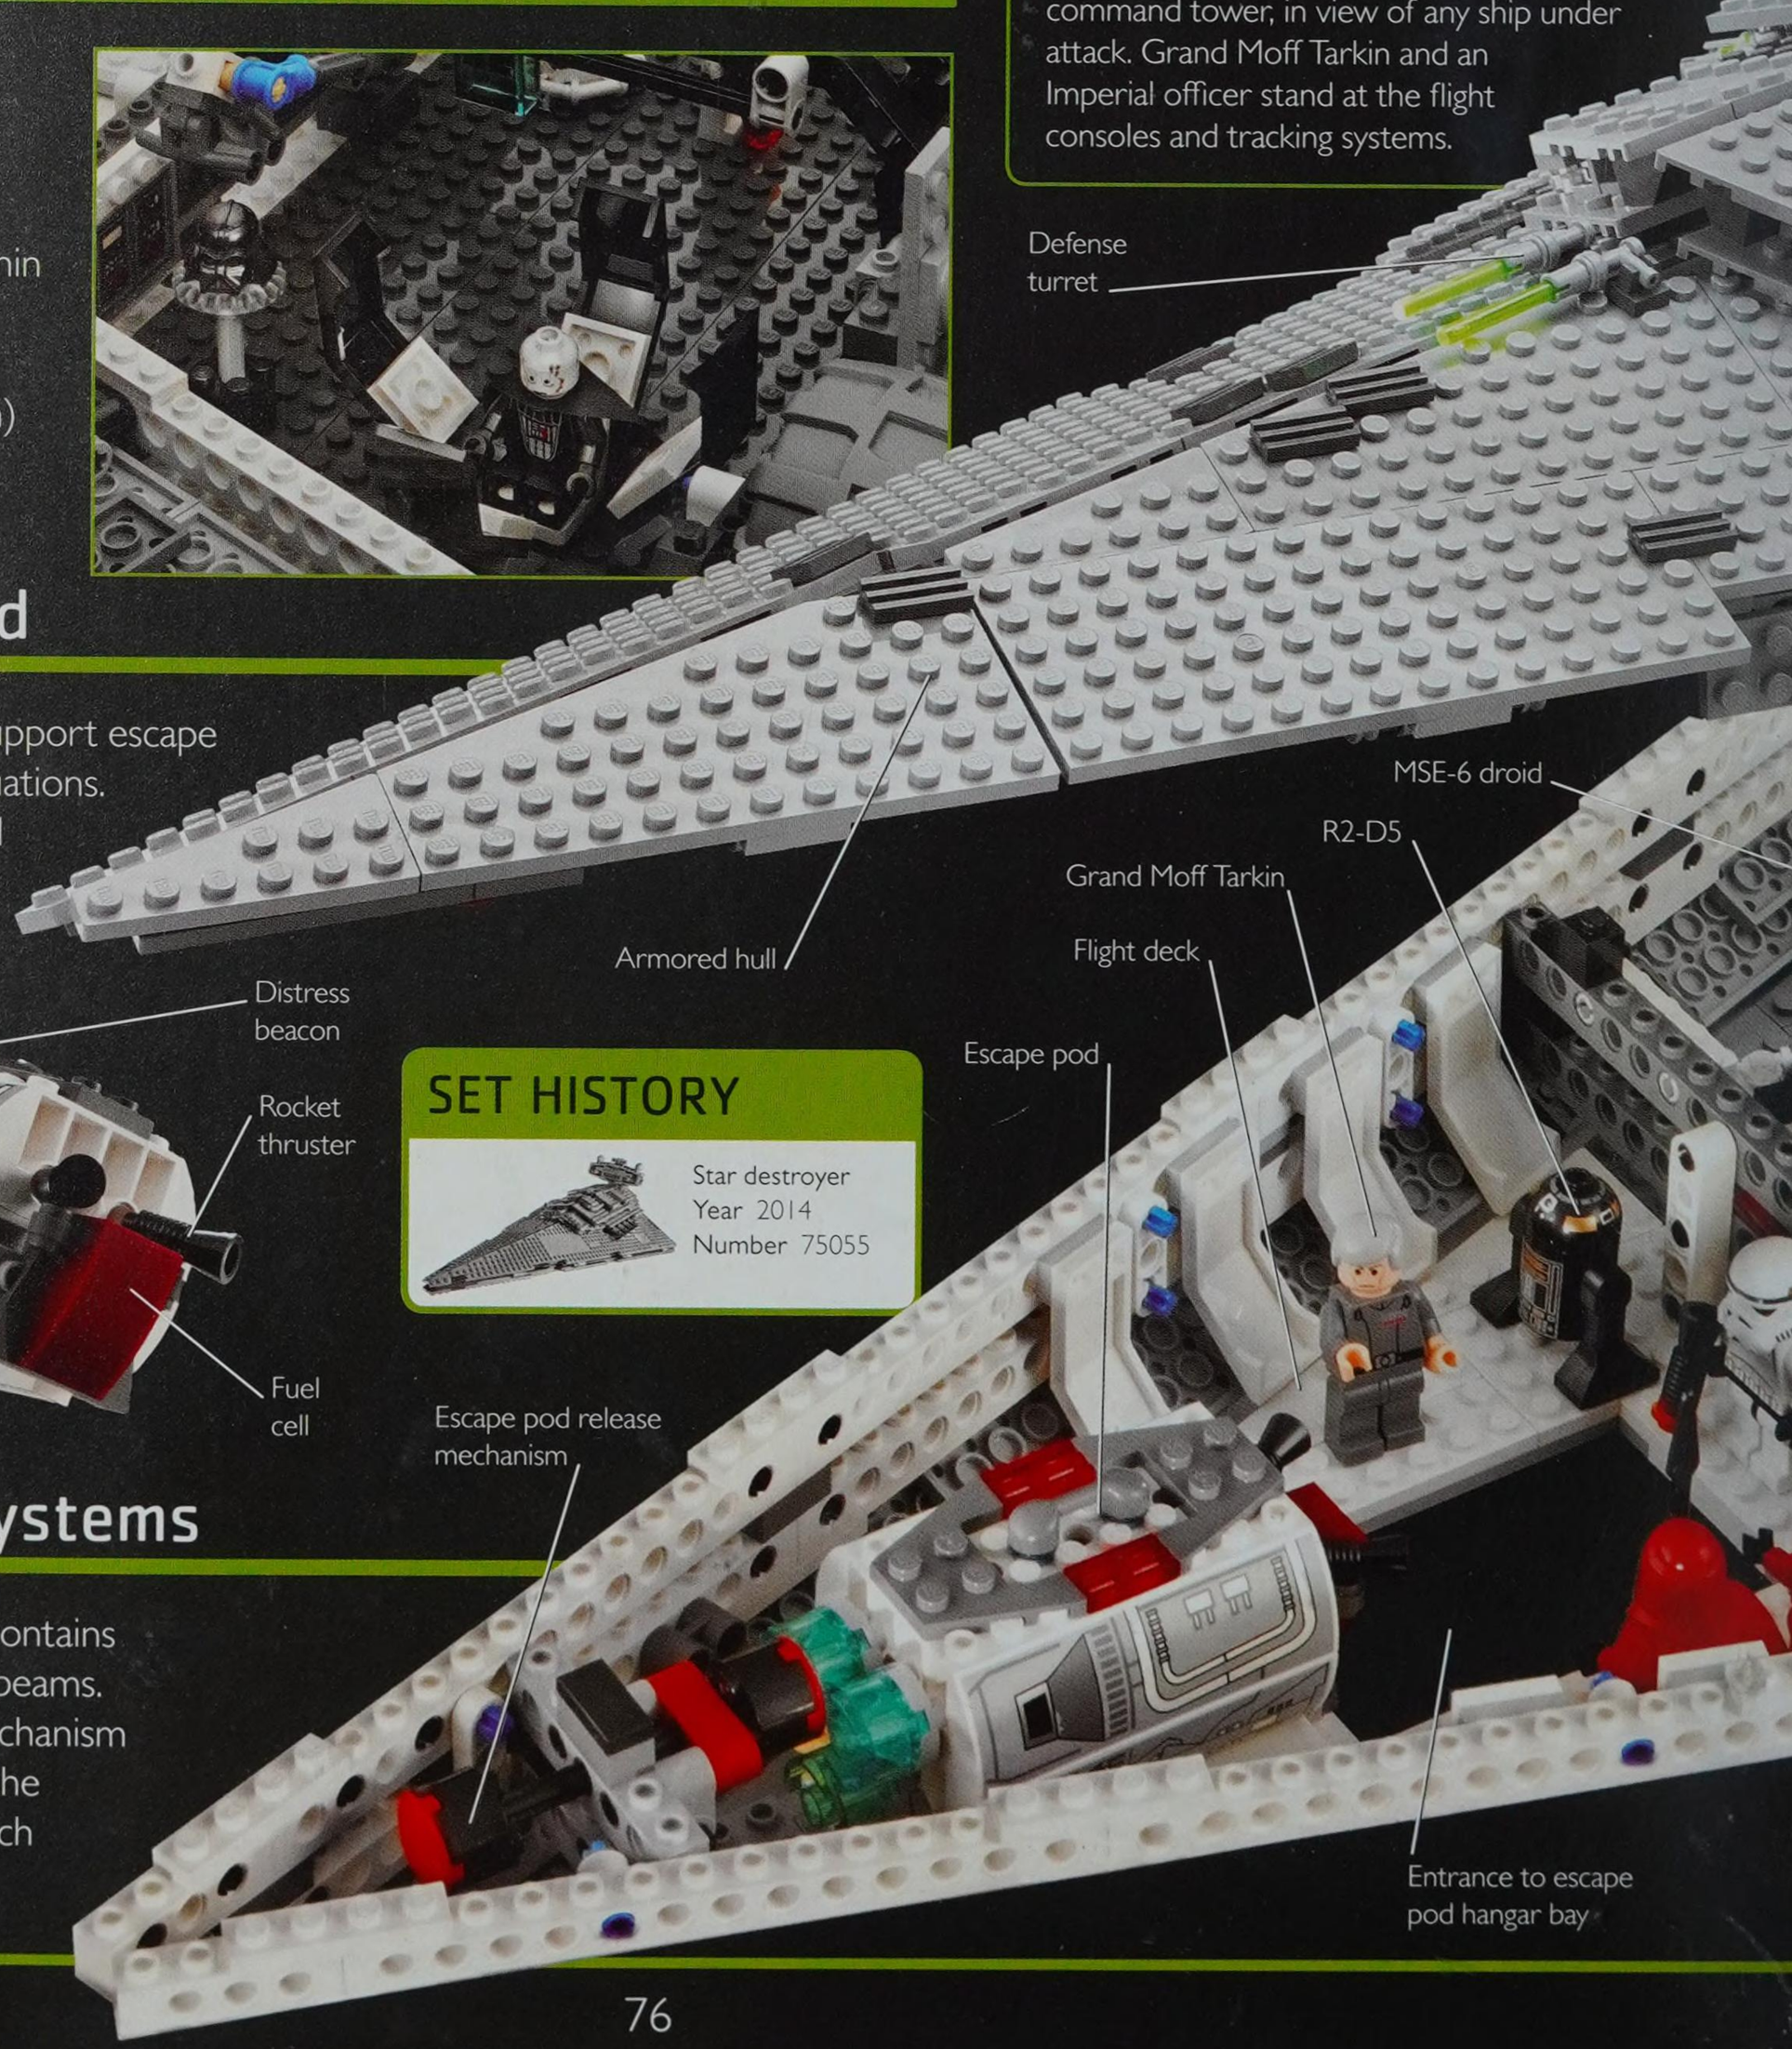

A Star Destroyer's nose contains powerful pursuit tractor beams. The model contains a mechanism that, when pulled, ejects the escape pod through a hatch in the ship's underside.

COMMAND BRIDGE
The bridge is situated at the center of the command tower, in view of any ship under attack. Grand Moff Tarkin and an Imperial officer stand at the flight consoles and tracking systems.

Cloud City

After the Battle of Hoth, Han Solo and Chewbacca escape with Leia and C-3PO to a floating pleasure resort and mining colony called Cloud City, located near a gas planet called Bespin. Its administrator, Lando Calrissian, is Han Solo's longtime friend and sometime rival. The arrival of Solo and the others, however, is preceded by Boba Fett and Darth Vader, who spring a trap and lure Luke Skywalker to a confrontation with Vader himself!

LEIA (BESPIN)

LEIA ORGANA
In the luxurious surroundings of Cloud City, Leia changes clothes, lets down her hair, and ties it back. Succumbing to Solo's charms, she has only a brief time to relax before she is ensnared in Vader's trap.

Duel with Vader

When Luke arrives at Cloud City to rescue his friends, Vader is waiting for him in the carbon freezing chamber. They ignite their lightsabers and duel through the chamber into a control room overlooking a huge reactor shaft. Luke is sucked through a smashed window and a final clash takes place on a treacherous gantry.

COLLAPSING WALLS
Darth Vader uses the Force to throw objects at Luke. Watch out for that collapsing wall, Luke!

THROUGH THE WINDOW
A viewport breaks open and a vacuum sucks Luke onto a narrow maintenance gantry, where the final confrontation occurs.

BESPIN GUARD
Sergeant Edian is a loyal member of the Bespin security forces, called the Wing Guard. He helps escort the carbon-frozen Han Solo onto Boba Fett's Slave I and his minifigure appears in Slave I (set 6209).

SERGEANT EDIAN

Landing Platform

Arriving starships usually dock on a landing platform outside the main wall of Cloud City. When Han and the others arrive in the Millennium Falcon, Lando Calrissian meets them. Later, he escorts Han and his friends to a dining room—but it's a trap. The Dark Lord of the Sith and his stormtroopers are waiting to capture them.

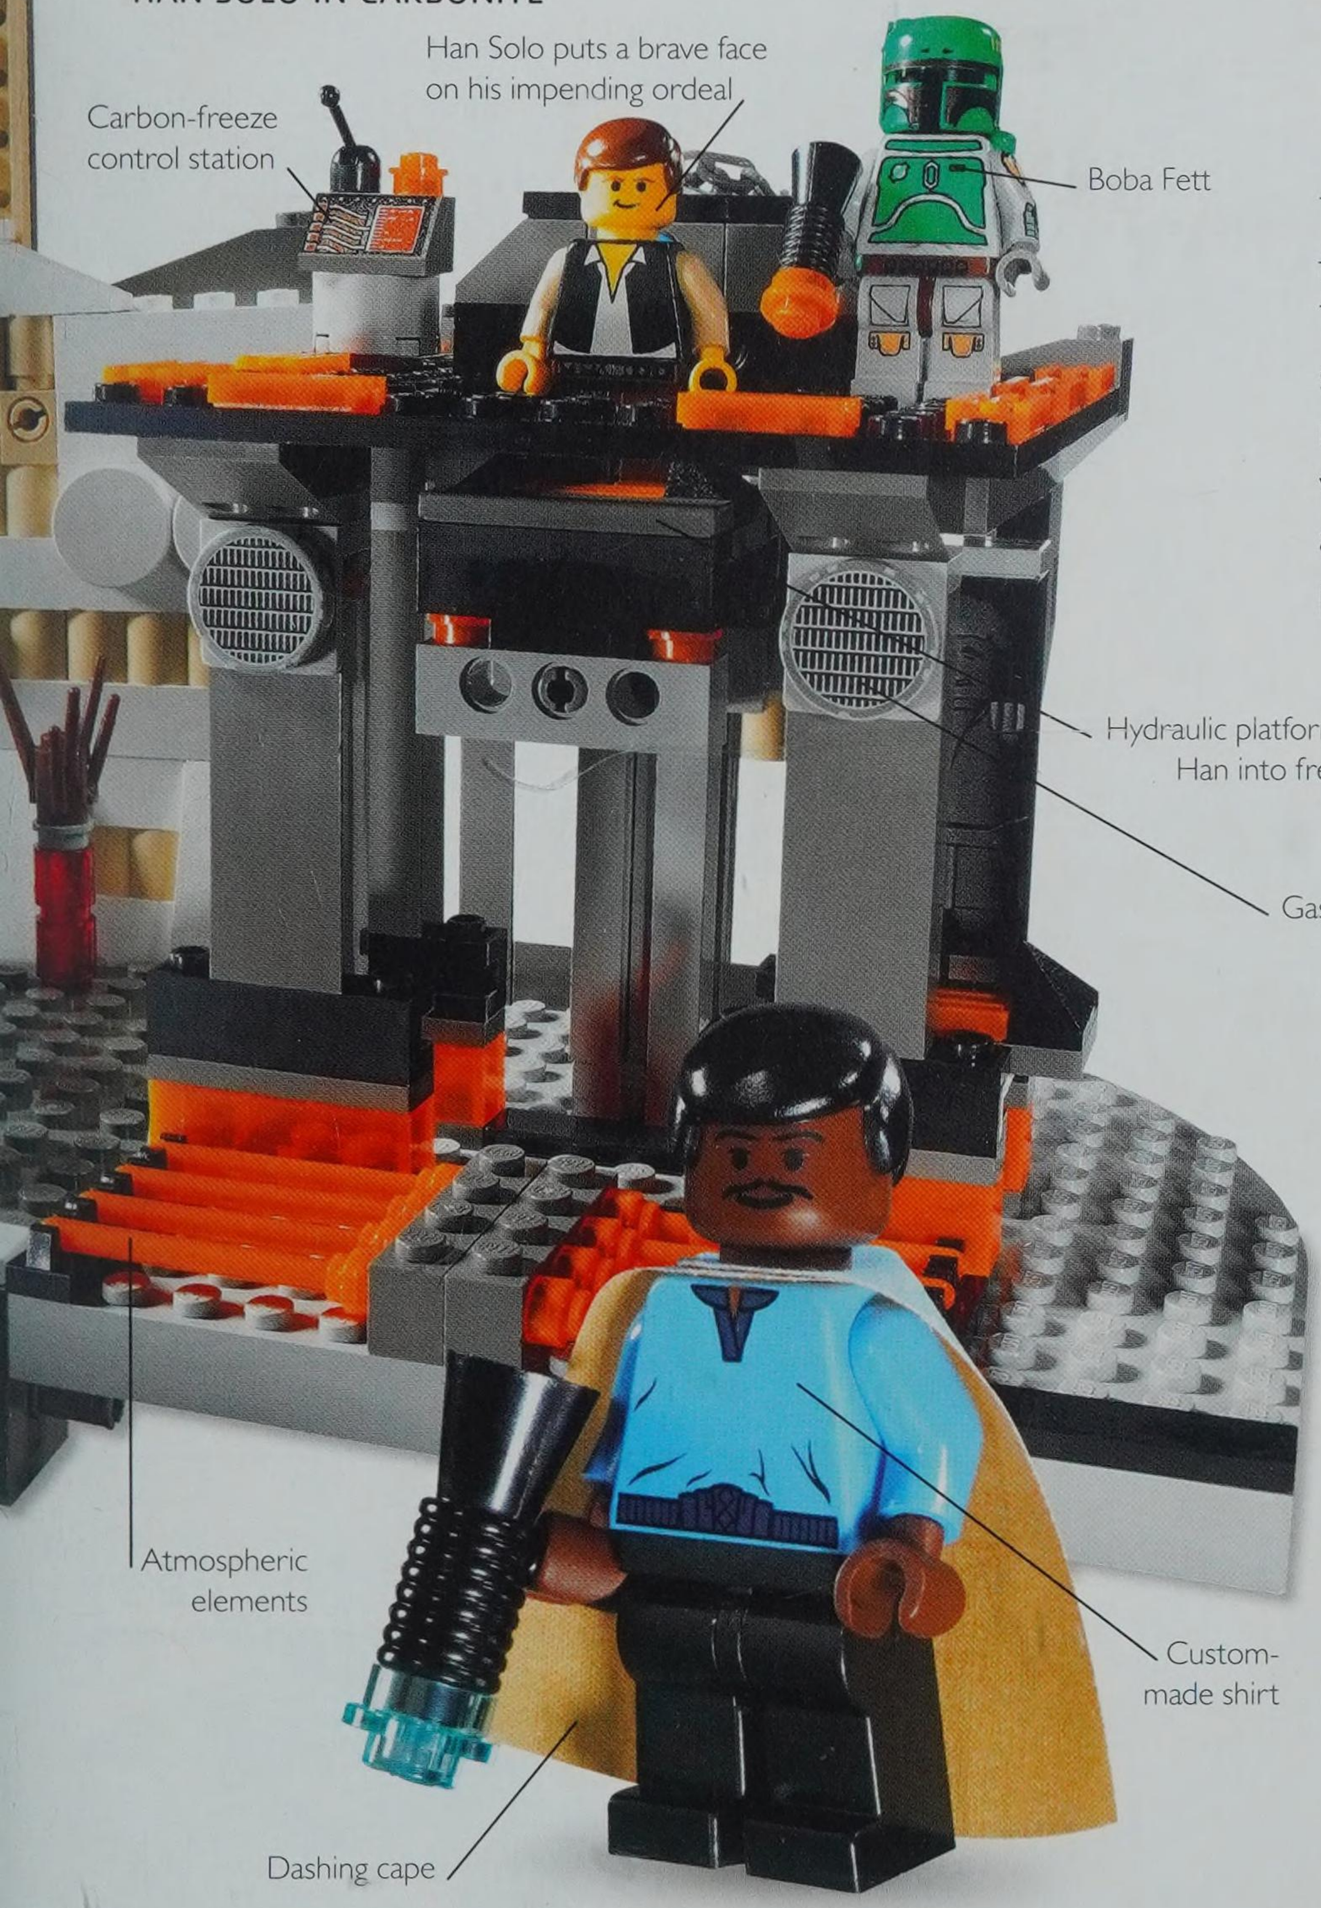

Carbon Freezing Chamber

HAN SOLO IN CARBONITE

Vader intends to carbon freeze Luke for transport to the Emperor, and decides to test the process on Han Solo. Watched by Calrissian, Vader, and Fett, Solo is lowered into the freezing chamber: he emerges frozen into a block of carbonite.

LANDO CALRISSIAN

Lando Calrissian is an ex-card shark who used his winning charms and sartorial style to become the baron-administrator of Cloud City. At first, Vader forces him to betray Solo, but Lando turns against the Imperials and eventually becomes a general in the Rebel Alliance.

Cloud Car

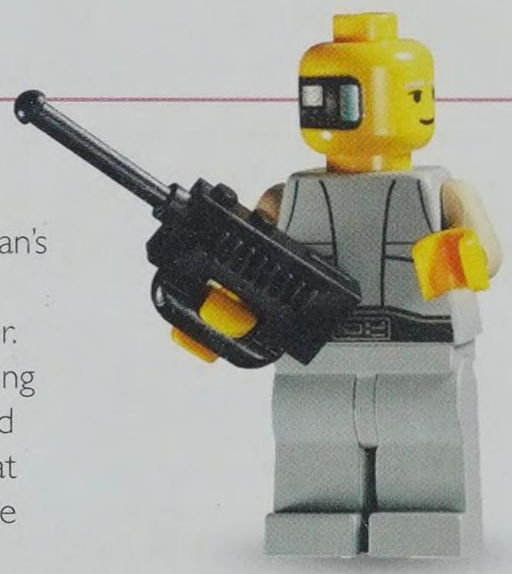

Twin-pod cloud cars patrol the skies of Cloud City. The city's Wing Guard security forces use an armed model of the cloud car for vigilance and emergency actions, though Lobot's personal cloud car is unarmed.

Rebel Alliance

Freedom fighters who have banded together as the Rebel Alliance are dedicated to the Empire's downfall. Some rebels are deserters from the Imperial forces, but many are untrained volunteers. With skillful leaders and a ragtag assortment of ships and weapons, the rebels prove a serious threat to Emperor Palpatine's iron rule.

Y-Wing Fighter

BTL-A4 Y-wings are old but tough workhorses of the rebel fleet, famously employed in the attacks on both Death Stars. They have hyperdrives, ion fission engines, and massive firepower, including ion cannons and laser weapons. HOTH REBEL SOLDIER

Since 1999 there have been eight different Hoth rebel minifigures. Early soldiers had yellow faces and visors; more recent minifigures have flesh-colored faces and squared-off, movie-accurate goggles.

Laser Ice Cutter

Vehicles often break down in the bitter cold of Hoth, forcing the rebels to patrol with tauntauns and one-man laser ice cutters while adapting their airspeeders to the frigid conditions. Laser ice cutters are combat speeders, with swiveling gun turrets and skirts designed to push through accumulated ice and snow.

Jabba the Hutt

A gigantic, slug-like Hutt with slimy skin, an unfathomable appetite, and a large, lascivious mouth, Jabba lives to strike shady deals with other members of the galactic underworld. He is protected by thugs and hirelings on whose loyalty he keeps a careful eye. Luke Skywalker and his friends seek to rescue Han Solo from Jabba's clutches, but run the risk of falling prey to the gangster's wiles and becoming his latest victims.

Crime Lord

The first LEGO form of Jabba the Hutt from 2003 was a three-piece mold with no decoration. In 2012, the LEGO Group created an all-new Hutt in a single mold, with printed details. His decoration includes a tan face, extra wrinkles of flesh, catlike eyes, and even a tattoo on his meaty arm. This more fearsome Jabba appears in Jabba's Palace (set 9516) and Jabba's Sail Barge (set 75020).

Jabba's Palace

In 2012, LEGO designers retraveled the lonely road that crosses the Dune Sea leading to the forbidding fortress of Jabba the Hutt. The revised palace is overrun with gangsters, bounty hunters, exotic creatures, cruel droids, entertainers, and servants. Rather than just re-creating the palace itself, the designers also produced a second set designed to stack underneath the throne room set—the dingy dungeon where the deadly rancor lives.

Throne Room

Jabba's palace once belonged to the mysterious order of B'omarr monks who continue to go about their business on the lower levels.
The palace is armed against external attacks with gun emplacements and missiles, and further dangers await those foolish enough to enter.
The fortress is riddled with secret compartments, trap doors, and other unwelcome surprises—not to mention the depraved thugs and criminals who call its dank passages home.

Accessories include a key, pitchfork, and bucket.

MALAKILI

A tubby human, Malakili cares for Jabba's fearsome rancor. Swiveling his head reveals a tearful alternate face—Malakili is fond of the beast.

B'OMARR MONK

These strange monks house their brains in jars ferried around by spiderlike droid bodies. The monks' legs are repurposed samurai swords.

GAMORREAN GUARD

These piglike guards serve Jabba as dim-witted muscle. This third incarnation has printed legs and a torso rich in detail.

SALACIOUS B. CRUMB

This Kowakian monkey-lizard, made from a single LEGO piece, serves as court jester. He loves to cackle at guests' misfortunes.

Jabba's Sail Barge

Jabba's Sail Barge is a giant repulsorlift pleasure craft that carries the crime lord and his undesirable entourage from his palace to Podraces, gladiatorial contests, and other shadier activities. It also transports Jabba to the Great Pit of Carkoon to watch Luke Skywalker being fed to the hungry beast that inhabits this basin in the desert.

REAR VIEW

The Khetanna

No respectable—or unrespectable—Hutt is complete without an opulent sail barge. Originally just a traveling pleasure craft, the Khetanna has been upgraded with prison cells, guards, armor plating, and a custom-mounted deck gun—testament to Jabba's need for protection from rival gangs. Jabba's 2013 LEGO sail barge also has the addition of a large cannon that slides out of the heavily armored hull. Three sides of the model fold down so that Jabba has a ringside view of Luke's planned execution, without the inconvenience of leaving his throne room.

Sand skiffs are repulsorlift platforms used to ferry passengers or prisoners to and from Jabba's palace. Luke is forced to walk the extensible plank over the Sarlacc pit.

Ewok Weapons

Endor's forest moon is inhabited by Ewoks, who help the rebels defeat the Imperial forces guarding the shield generator bunker (including, in this set, a stormtrooper and a scout trooper on a speeder bike). The Ewoks use weapons that are crude—simple wooden catapults and gliders—but these furry creatures are tough and resourceful.

Bright Tree Village

Deep in the primeval woodland of Endor's forest moon is Bright Tree Village, the home of the Ewoks. Although the wooden building materials are primitive, the resourceful Ewoks have created a complex network of tree-top dwellings, protected by hidden fortifications. When the rebels stumble into Ewok territory, they get a mixed reception but soon win over the furry creatures—who prove to be an invaluable ally.

Expanded Universe

Comics, video games, and TV specials have also contributed to the storytelling riches of a galaxy far, far away, recounting tales from various eras in Star Wars history. Star Wars: The Old Republic video game is set millennia before the fall of the Republic, Star Wars: The Yoda Chronicles tells a humorous story about a serious Sith threat, and Star Wars: The Force Unleashed video game pits Darth Vader against his own Sith apprentice.

Republic Striker-Class Starfighter

Thousands of years before Luke Skywalker's birth, the Republic battled the fanatical Sith Empire. Jedi Masters such as Satele Shan piloted fast, nimble Striker-class fighters, assisted by astromech droids like T7-O1. The 2012 release of the Striker includes wings and blaster cannons that fold up in landing mode, plus flick missiles, and lightsaber storage at the stern.

Heavily shielded and armed, the Fury interceptor's development was personally overseen by the ruthless Sith Lord Darth Malgus. The interceptor features detachable wings, a cockpit that opens, and a rear troop hold.

A Jedi mobile command center, the Defender has powerful sensors and communications capabilities, with weapons to safeguard it on the battlefield. This set has bridge compartments, hidden storage for Holocrons, and twin escape pods.

The treads rotate, elevating the cockpit to avoid obstacles or fire the principal flick-fire missiles. The set comes with two shadow stormtroopers, feared servants of the Emperor.

Rogue Shadow

Built in total secrecy, Rogue Shadow is a unique starship that features an experimental cloaking device, an advanced hyperdrive, sophisticated sensor arrays, and high-performance sublight engines. Darth Vader's secret apprentice, Galen Marek, and female Imperial pilot Juno Eclipse (with whom Marek falls in love) pilot the ship. The set also includes a battle-scarred Darth Vader and is based on the game Star Wars: The Force Unleashed.

An expert pilot, he is a dangerous opponent when flying his stealth fighter.

Chapter 3: Specialist Sets

Planet Sets

In 2012 and 2013 the LEGO Group offered a dozen mini-ships, each accompanied by a minifigure, a planet (or other celestial phenomenon) introduced in the six Star Wars movies, and a plaque. The planets can be hung from a wire for display, and several of the minifigures are unique or reworked from their previous LEGO set appearances.

Microfighters

In 2014, the LEGO Group launched a new series as a follow-up to the planet series. Microfighters are pocket-sized models designed for play, collecting, and trading. Each microfighter is an iconic vehicle in a chunky new scale using around 100 bricks. Although smaller than normal minifigure-scaled models, these sets are all designed to combine with an attachable minifigure.

Star Destroyer

The dagger-shaped Imperial star destroyer may be tiny compared to its usual gigantic form, but its turbolaser flick-fire missile packs a punch against Luke's dinky X-wing. The Imperial minifigure is exclusive to this set and sits in the wedge-shaped nose of the craft.

LEGO® Technic

LEGO® Technic is an advanced building range that utilizes gears and interconnecting rods to create complex models with moving parts. In 2000, the LEGO Group released the first LEGO Technic Star Wars models, with a pit droid, battle droid, and destroyer droid (or droideka). Since then, new LEGO Technic sets have appeared for each Prequel Trilogy movie, as well as the Classic Trilogy movies.

Pit Droid

Utilizing elastic bands, the pit droid folds up into its compressed form (for storage). A tap on the nose makes the model stand up again.

Battle Droid

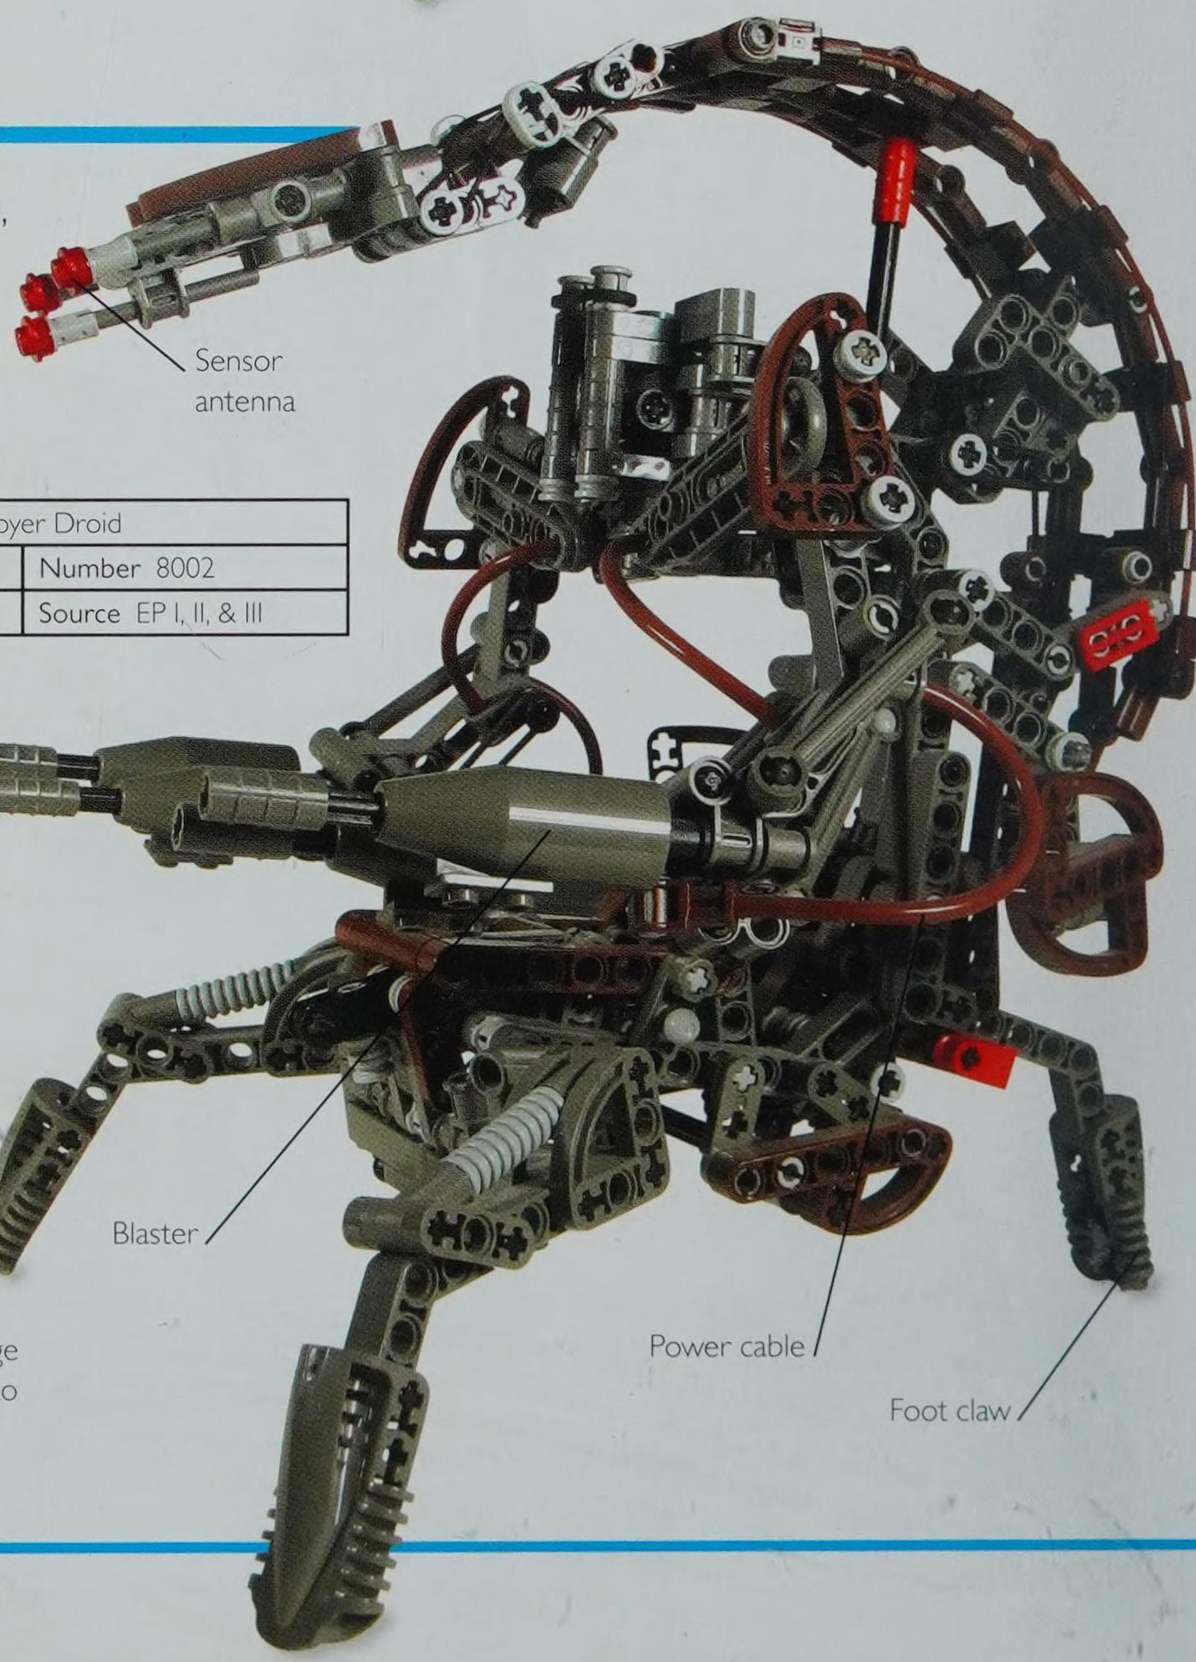

The battle droid measures over 33cm (13 inches) tall when standing and can fold up for transportation. When a dial on the back is turned, its arm reaches to the side of its backpack to grab a blaster. The model also comes with spare parts to convert it into a security officer or a commander droid.

BRICK FACTS

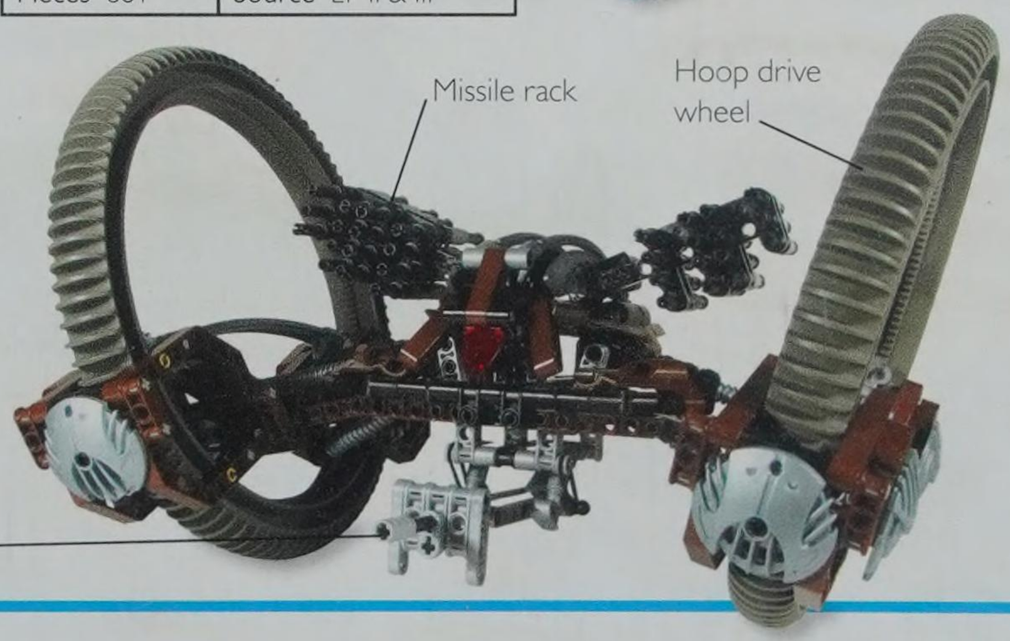

In 2008, a LEGO Technic model of General Grievous was issued as an Ultimate Collector's Set (set 10186). Unusually, it consisted of a mix of regular LEGO bricks alongside LEGO Technic pieces.

Hailfire Droid

This sturdy model of the hailfire droid rolls on its giant hoop wheels. The central blaster gun snaps into place and flick-fires missiles. The model, which is not packaged as a LEGO Technic set, is in proportion to LEGO Star Wars minifigures.

Ultimate Collector Sets

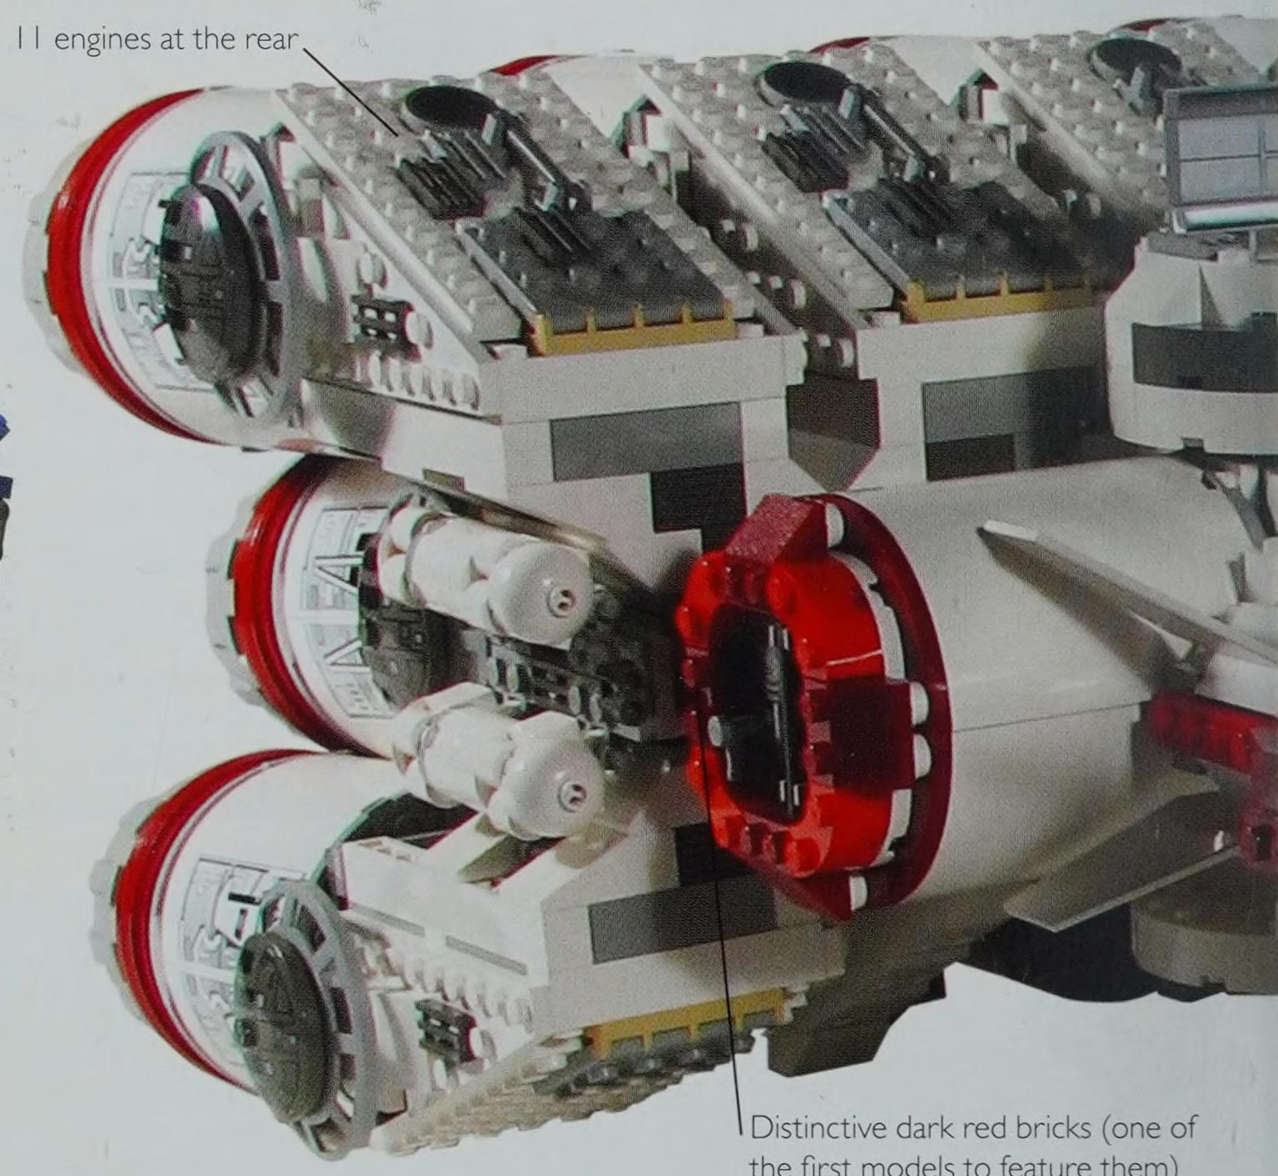

The LEGO Group has issued a small number of highly detailed Star Wars models called Ultimate Collector Sets (or UCS). Intended for older builders and primarily for display, each set includes a collector's card and, in many cases, a display stand. Most are not scaled for minifigures, though some, such as Millennium Falcon, are minifigure-scaled.

TIE Interceptor

The TIE Interceptor is captured accurately, with its long dagger-like wings (which can be folded to lie flat) and a hinged cockpit with a detailed interior featuring a pilot seat, controls, a HUD (heads-up display or transparent data screen), and several monitor screens. The model sits on an adjustable stand, which allows it to be displayed in a variety of positions.

Tantive IV

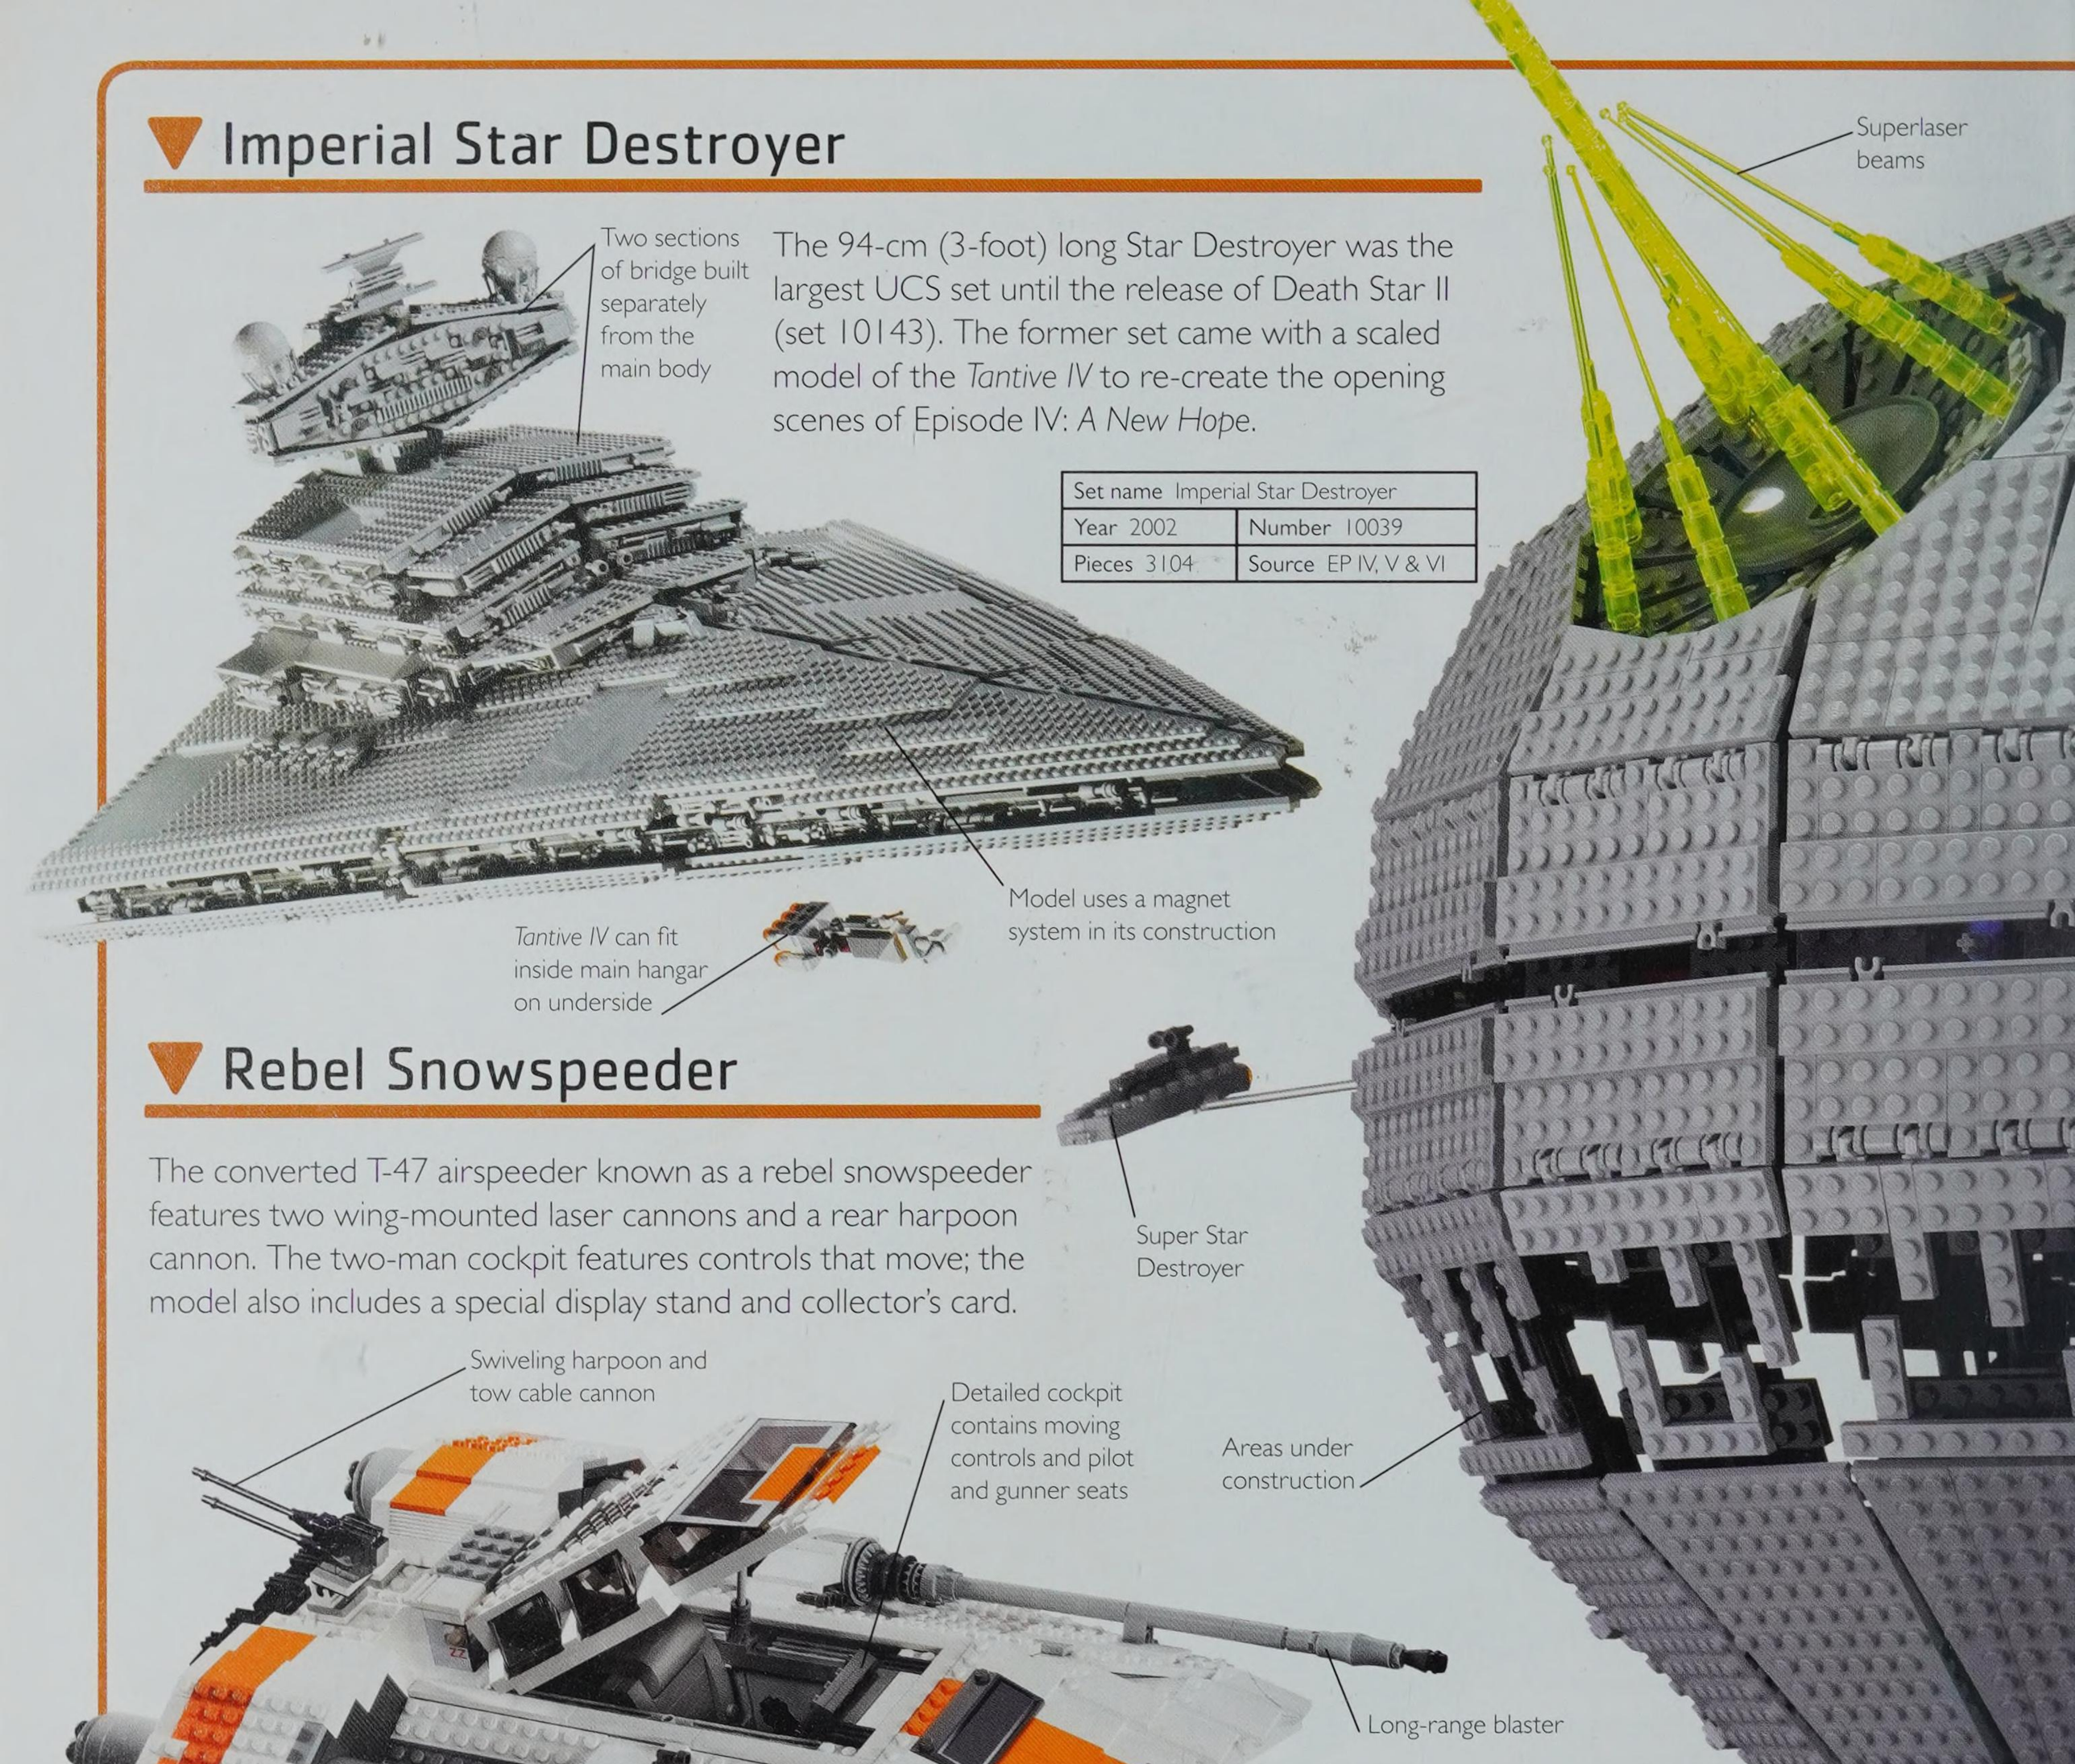

Princess Leia Organa's consular starship, Tantive IV (otherwise known as the Blockade Runner), is one of the largest LEGO Ultimate Collector sets, at over 60cm (2 feet) long and almost 30cm (1 foot) wide. The highly detailed model is made up of separate sections—front, mid, and rear engine block—built individually and then pegged together. The top and lower turbo lasers rotate and the ship is supported on "landing gear" stands.

BRICK FACTS

The year 2000 saw the release of an UCS X-Wing (set 7191), with 1304 pieces, a gearbox to operate the s-foils, moving controls in the cockpit, and an R2-D2 minifigure. The model is nearly 60-cm (2-feet) long, with a wingspan of 45.5cm (18inches).

Imperial Star Destroyer

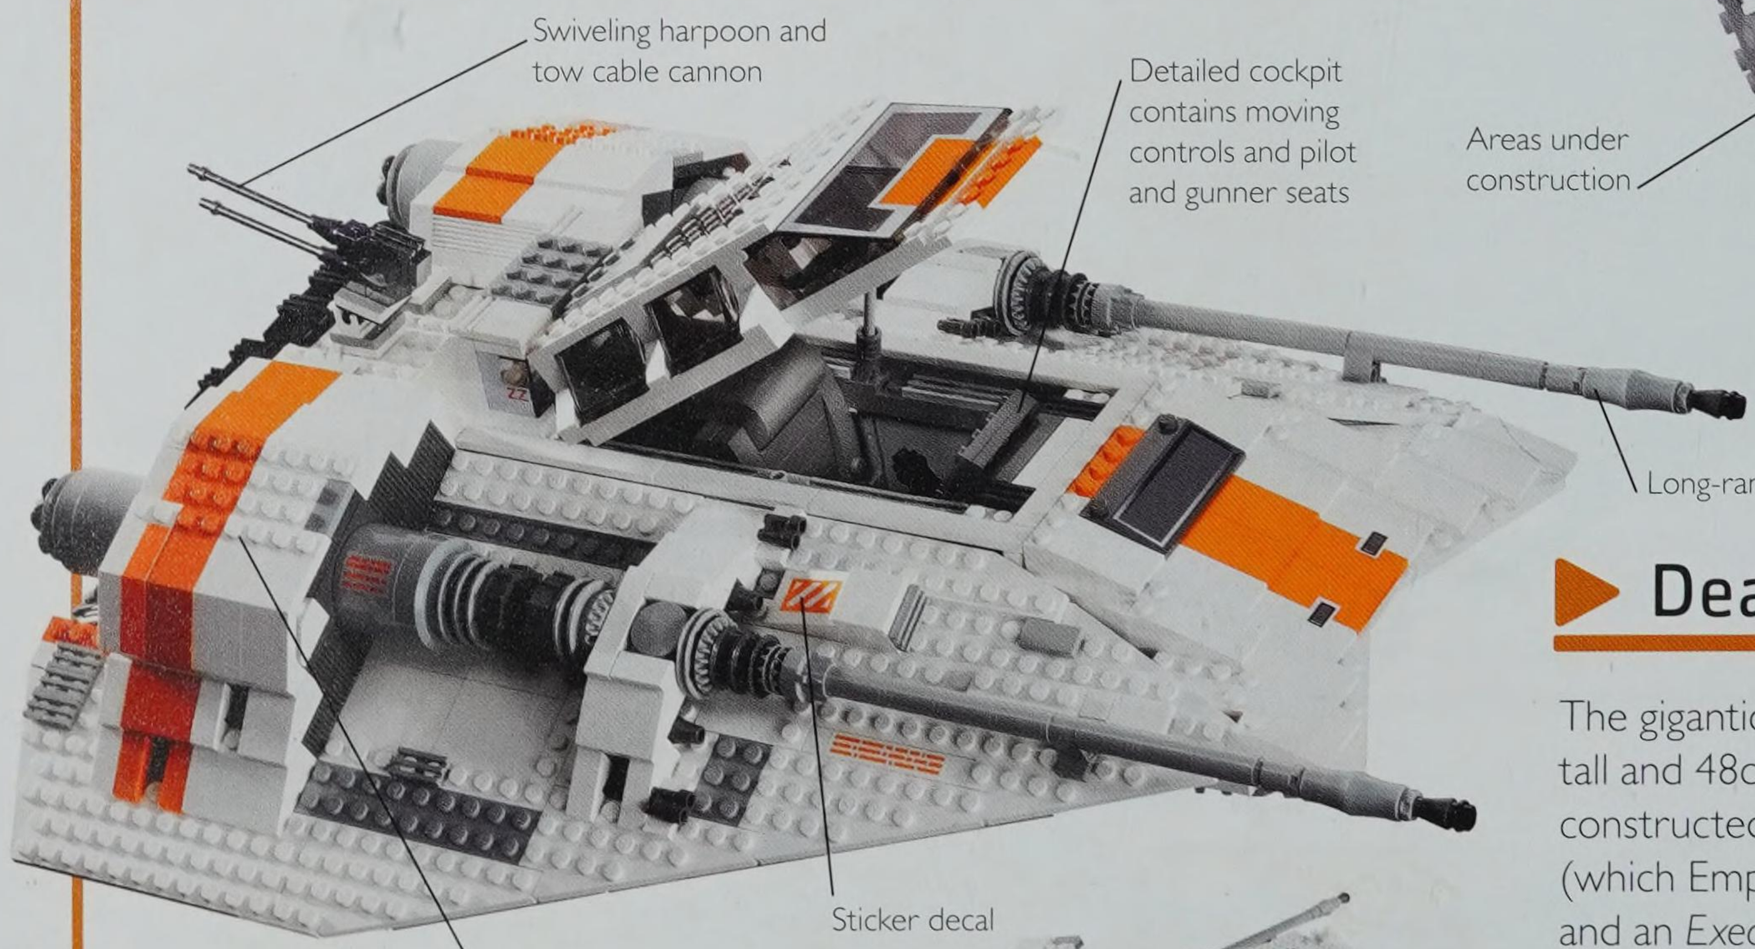

The 94-cm (3-foot) long Star Destroyer was the largest UCS set until the release of Death Star II (set 10143). The former set came with a scaled model of the Tantive IV to re-create the opening scenes of Episode IV: A New Hope.

Super Star Destroyer

The first-ever Super Star Destroyer produced by The LEGO Group is also the largest USC, measuring 124.5cm (50 inches) from bow to stern and weighing nearly 8lb (3.6kg). A section of the fuselage lifts up to reveal a command center where Darth Vader meets with bounty hunters searching for the Millennium Falcon (and takes orders from a unique, handheld hologram of the Emperor). A scaled version of the Imperial Star Destroyer connects to the hull with a clear rod.

Obi-Wan Kenobi pursues bounty hunters across the galaxy in his Delta-7 Aethersprite-class light interceptor, which is 47cm (18 inches) long and 22cm (9 inches) wide when built. The Jedi starfighter has dual laser cannons and a fully detailed cockpit interior. The domed head of astromech droid R4-P17 attaches to the wing and rotates. The fighter also comes with a display stand and plaque.

B-Wing Starfighter

A powerful strike fighter used by the rebels at the Battle of Endor, this B-wing measures 66cm (26 inches) wide and 38cm (15 inches) high. Its cockpit rotates and remains level in flight mode and its wings fold for takeoff and landing. Its designer decided on the scale by searching for parts for the cockpit, settling on motorcycle wheels and treads originally used in a LEGO bulldozer set from the 1970s.

Seasonal Sets

Since 2011, the LEGO Group has released an annual seasonal set offering minifigures and parts for making micro sets of Star Wars vehicles. Children (or adults) open a window for each day of Advent for the countdown to Christmas, revealing a toy. Each seasonal set has surprises, such as a Christmas tree or a unique minifigure or two, dressed in garb appropriate for the holiday season.

2011 Advent Calendar

The countdown to Christmas 2011 began for LEGO fans with a miniature Republic cruiser and ended with Yoda resplendent in a Santa costume. Other highlights include a Republic gunship with movable wings, tools, and weapons racks, and a Christmas tree from a galaxy far, far away. The calendar art shows Yoda and a rebel pilot watching the Battle of Endor unfold around them.

THE VISUAL DICTIONARY

Designing LEGO® Star Wars®

Jens Kronvold Frederiksen is design director of the LEGO® Star Wars® team in Billund, Denmark. He has worked at the LEGO Group for 16 years, 15 of them in the LEGO Star Wars team. For the first edition of this book, Jens shared behind-the-scenes secrets about the creation of LEGO Star Wars. DK caught up with him again, to find out what he's been up to in the five years since his last interview.

A lot has happened in the last five years, and there have been many new LEGO Star Wars models. Which is your favorite?
It's hard to say because there have been so many! I would say the two sets that fit together: Jabba's Palace (set 9516) and Rancor Pit (set 75005). Firstly, there are lots of very cool minifigures and Jabba the Hutt is really improved. I actually did the original one, but the sculpt of this one is much better and it has printing for the first time. Secondly, there is so much to the scene. Originally we planned one set, but rather than scaling back our ideas, we created two sets. We had had feedback from the first Jabba's Palace set that children were disappointed because there was no rancor pit. So, that was what we did.

And which is your favorite minifigure?
It has to be Max Reebo from Jabba's Sail Barge (set 75020). He is just a plain blue guy, with short legs and no decoration, but he is such an iconic figure, and his unique head sculpt really works in the LEGO medium.

What have been your highlights of the last five years?
One thing that has been new for us, and extremely interesting, has been developing the Yoda Chronicles television series. We were allowed to develop our own characters and delve into the storytelling for Lucasfilm. We also had to make sure that everything on-screen was consistent with how it would look if it was really made from LEGO bricks. We were also involved with the short films The Padawan Menace and The Empire Strikes Out, again ensuring all the LEGO building looked convincing.

Jens and Michael discuss the new dewback model.

These animations have really given LEGO Star Wars another dimension, and also a humor, which is an important part of its identity.

How big is the LEGO Star Wars team now?
The size of the team varies; we have regular staff and then extra designers coming in and out, but it has grown in the last five years. In 2009, we had one graphic designer; now we have three. And we have had up to eight designers.

Do you start by sketching or drawing models or do you build with LEGO bricks?
This is very much up to the designer; they all work differently. Some work best by sketching on paper or computer, and some just start building. We then have the "sketch model" calculated to make sure it fits the price point. For a very rough idea, we sometimes put the model on a scale to weigh it.

What kind of tests do you do?
We build the models together to ensure the building instructions are clear, and we test the stability of the models to make sure no elements are stretched. We also heat-test the models! If you display a LEGO model in your window, the sun may warm it up. Plastic expands in the heat, which means the bricks will be a little looser. We put the model in an oven at 60 degrees Celsius for about four hours, which is the same stress as if a model were standing for about a year in a window. The big Ultimate Collectors Millennium Falcon (set 10179) was too big for the oven, so we called a swimming pool and put the model in their sauna, and it worked!

I've also heard of something called the butter test! What is that?
Plastic can react to the sweat on people's fingers, which can alter the tension in the way the bricks connect together. When new elements are made or we connect two pieces in a new way, then we cover the joins in butter, which acts in the same way as the grease in sweat. If there is too much tension, cracks will appear in the plastic after about 24 hours.

To scale sketch model of a Gamorrean Guard next to its final minifigure

And you work together with Lucasfilm?
Yes, Lucas Licensing (LFL) approves the assortment; they might recommend a vehicle because it's in the new TV series Star Wars: Rebels. Our assortment always has classic models and new models from the latest TV show or movie. LFL also evaluate the sets according to their official reference, which we also use. They are very particular about the exterior, but are normally quite open about the interior. Like us, LFL is very aware that the models are actually toys and do have to be fun, so sometimes we will put in something that is not in the movies: for example, Jabba's Sail Barge (set 75020) has a big pirate cannon hidden in the bow. It's fun because it can shoot LEGO pieces and because the barge looks a bit like a pirate ship.

Has your creative process changed at all since 2009?
Our basic processes are the same, but we are increasingly involving children. Focus-testing products has become standard, and we have children in every week to play with our products at every stage of development. Seeing children use the models is invaluable: There might be something that falls apart, or something left in the corner that nobody plays with.

Do you have an example of something you have changed after feedback?
A big focus for us has been the stability of our models. We have had many TIE fighters, for example, but the latest one (set 9492) is far more stable. Because we had done TIE Fighters before, we could use direct consumer feedback to make improvements.

Prototype model of a Self-Propelled Heavy Artillery (SPHA) walker, complete with clone troopers, but never released in a set.

It can be a challenge to ensure something is stable enough to play with when using reference material, for example X-wings have long guns on the wingtips that could break off quite easily. Where necessary, we ensure models break in a controlled way and are simple to put back together, rather than disintegrating into small pieces.

You often redesign existing sets. Why is that?
Some ships and playsets are so classic and iconic that they are always in demand from children and collectors. However, LEGO design moves on, and we want to make sure that everything is as new and improved as it can be. When we relaunch something, it should look different and be better, with new play functions and new minifigures. It is a balance though, because we also want to do completely new things.

Do you have lots of LEGO bricks on your desk?
Yes, lots! Although my job as design director is largely a managing role, I still develop models. Partly because I love to build, but also because a big part of my job is to give feedback to designers, so I have to keep myself sharp. It means I'm always familiar with the latest bricks and processes. As long as I have time for building, I will never give it up.

Designing the exclusive minifigure

Lauge Drewes is a design manager at the LEGO Group. Back in 1998, he designed the Luke minifigure from Landspeeder (set 7110). When it was decided to revise this minifigure for an exclusive for this book, he was the man for the job.

How did you feel about being involved with this project?
When the Star Wars team asked me if I wanted to revise the classic Luke minifigure, I was happy to be involved, but I never realized what an amazing trip down memory lane it would be! The original minifigure came out in 1999, so I was working on it back in 1998. It is an honor to work on licenses like Star Wars, where you really have a lot of emotion invested in your work.

Can you tell me a little about yourself?
I was on the Star Wars team when the line first began and I created all graphics during the first five years; that is, all the printed or stickered decorations on minifigures and elements, for example, the Ewok glider for Ewok Attack in 2002 (set 7139). For that, we used the die-cut from a windsurf sail and reworked the graphics. I also built some of the early models, like the AAT (set 7155), which was one of the first to have gradient pieces on the front and top. It was easy to get the right proportions for this model, because the battle droids are only two elements wide—minifigures would have needed much more space.

How has the exclusive Luke minifigure changed from the original?
There are subtle changes to the front of the torso and an all-new printing on his back, with slightly more wrinkles on the clothing. The stroke thickness is more dynamic too, rather than just using a uniform thickness. When I look at the original Luke, I am still proud that I made him, but the new one is better! Since 2010 we have had a very coherent style guide for minifigures, so the first Luke was a step on the way, but the new one is the right Luke, in the right LEGO style!

How do you decide how much detail to print on a minifigure?
It can be hard to find the balance between too little and too much detail. Once, I put lots of detail on a pirate minifigure, and was asked to remove it all, leaving just the stripes. This was the right move: It would have had more detail popping out compared to the rest of the set. It can be easy to get carried away, but less can definitely be more—you need negative space for the eye to rest on.

These days more minifigures have printing on the back. Why is that?
When I started in 1995, we printed the front of minifigures. Pieces had to go in another machine to have the back printed. Later, we got a machine that printed the front of the torso, rotated it, then printed the back. Today we only use that machine, so most torsos have detail on the front and the back.

What has been your favorite set in the last five years?
Hoth Rebel Base (set 7666). It shows my favorite scene from the films, and it has so much detail and play value. If I imagine being 30 years younger, I could play with it for hours! I also love the latest Hoth Rebel trooper minifigures with the cap and the goggles.

Merchandising

LEGO® Star Wars® is not just about bricks and pieces—fans can also dress the part and accessorize themselves (and their fridges) to match. Much of the LEGO Star Wars merchandise incorporates construction or play elements, such as watches you can build and customizable pens. Adult collectors can make grown-up-sized watches and special maquette minifigures—strictly for display, not play!

Maquettes

California-based model-making company Gentle Giant Studios created a series of 15.25-cm (6-inch) limited-edition maquettes based on LEGO Star Wars videogame characters. As a surprise extra, some Vader maquettes came with a spare gray Anakin Skywalker head and a few stormtroopers also had a Han Solo head!

Promotional Pieces

All around the world, LEGO® Star Wars® fans get together in small venues and giant convention centers to learn the latest LEGO news, share their creations, and encourage fellow builders. The LEGO Group often attends these events to showcase new sets and interact with its enthusiastic builders and collectors. Loyal fans are often rewarded with exclusive LEGO Star Wars sets or minifigures—the space race to locate collectible promotional items is on!

Rare Minifigures

To celebrate 30 years of the LEGO minifigure, 10,000 metallic gold C-3PO minifigures were randomly inserted into LEGO Star Wars sets in 2007. Even rarer are the five C-3PO minifigures made of solid 14kt gold! In 2010 Boba Fett joined the highest ranks of exclusivity when two solid bronze variants were released as part of a "May the Fourth" promotion. That year also saw 10,000 white Bobas given away at toy fairs and Star Wars Days.

Life-Size X-Wing in Times Square

To celebrate the May 2013 launch of the new animated TV series The Yoda Chronicles, the LEGO Group unveiled a life-sized X-wing (scaled for humans rather than minifigures) in Times Square, New York. The build is an exact replica of the X-Wing Starfighter (set 9493), magnified 42 times, and consisting of 5,335,200 LEGO bricks. It took a team of 32 builders 17,336 hours (about 4 months) to construct and is officially the world's largest ever LEGO model. The event also included a LEGO R2-D2 and X-wing pilot model ready for photo opportunities, and a LEGO Yoda bearing a t-shirt with the slogan "NY I Love."

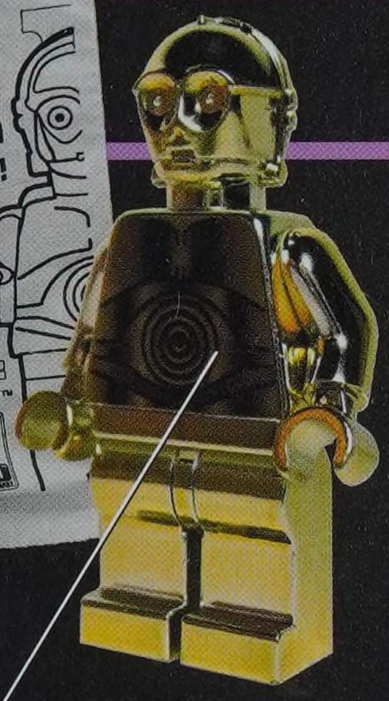

The X-wing builders had to make sure that their model, weighing 20,856kg (45,980lb), would be safe above the New York subway system!

The super-sized starfighter measures 3.35m (11ft) in height, 13.1m (43ft) in length, and has a wingspan of 13.44m (44ft).

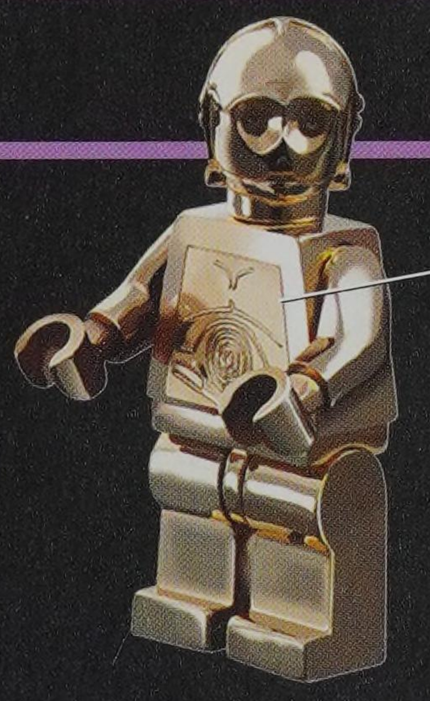

The model was carefully built to withstand transportation—from its original base in the LEGO Model Shop in Kladno, Czech Republic, to New York, and finally on to LEGOLAND® California.

Fan Creations

The LEGO® fan community spans generations, reaches across continents, and bridges languages. The beauty of LEGO bricks is that you can make just about anything with them, and groups of expert builders, or AFOLS (Adult Fans of LEGO), do just that. Their custom designs even have their own specialist term: MOCs (My Own Creations). The simple brick has been transformed into the most creative and versatile construction element in the world.

Carbon-Freezing Chamber

Markus Aspacher (markus1984) took just five days to create this wonderful MOC of the Carbon-Freezing Chamber in 2013. Measuring 34 x 40 centimeters (13 x 16 inches), it utilizes around 2000 bricks. A Han Solo minifigure being lowered into the freezing chamber brings the whole grisly scene to life.

Mos Eisley

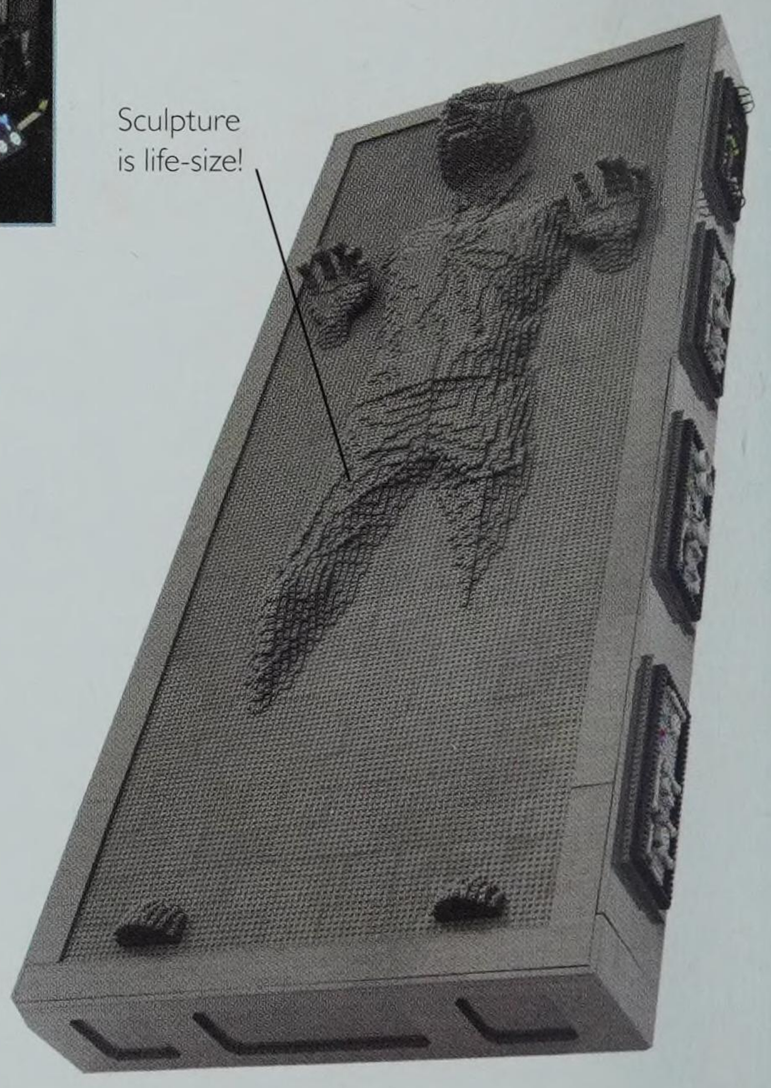

The Brickish Association is a UK-based community of AFOLS. Its members displayed their impressively detailed Mos Eisley diorama at the UK's National Space Centre and at Star Wars: Celebration Europe in 2007.

Death Star

This detailed diorama showcases the Death Star, complete with a model of the Millennium Falcon. It was built by Austrian Markus Aspacher in 2012 and took around two months to construct. It measures 60 x 90 centimeters (24 x 35 inches). Markus used 7500 bricks in his creation, favoring flat tiles for a realistic, polished look.

Frozen Han Solo

Artist and brick builder extraordinaire Nathan Sawaya used 10,000 bricks to create this 1.7-meter (5.5-feet) tall sculpture of Han Solo frozen in carbonite.

Mark Borlase's re-creation of Echo Base took four years to build. It has motorized hangar doors, a Millennium Falcon, and superbly detailed AT-ATs. Snowtroopers lower themselves from AT-ATs and advance toward the rebel lines, complete with laser turrets and tauntauns.

Theed Hangar

Amado C. Pinlac (ACPin) has been building impressive MOCs for over a decade. This wonderfully detailed diorama captures the Theed hangar battle scene, and includes four N-1 starfighters and an advancing Trade Federation droid army. The scene took Amado three months to build.

FAN ART

South Korean photographer Je Hyung Lee (storm TK431) creates imaginative images using his own backgrounds and a variety of LEGO Star Wars minifigures. The scenes have a modern, humorous twist, so don't be surprised if you see a stormtrooper-versus-Jedi ice-hockey match, or stormtroopers playing guitar and toasting marshmallows around a campfire!

Video Games

In 2005 the LEGO® Star Wars® minifigure boldly went where it hadn't been before. LEGO Star Wars: The Video Game enabled gamers to play through the action of Episodes I–III as any one of 56 minifigures, from Obi-Wan Kenobi to a GNK Droid! It was followed in 2006 by LEGO Star Wars II: The Original Trilogy and in 2011 by LEGO Star Wars III: The Clone Wars.

A World of Adventure

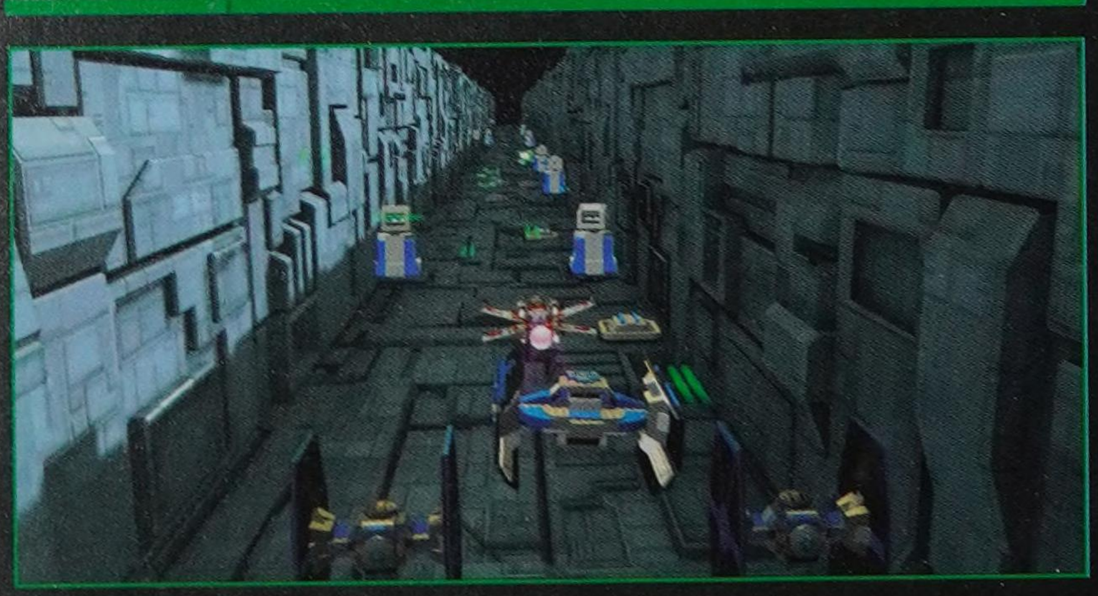

Yoda storms into battle flanked by loyal clone troopers in LEGO Star Wars III: The Clone Wars.

When TT Games and the LEGO Group developed the digital version of LEGO Star Wars, they wanted the functionality of the games to match the physical playability of the sets that fans know and love. So, gamers can play from the viewpoint of various minifigure characters, and LEGO studs act as the games' currency—to be collected while wandering around the interactive levels.

Players can freeze one character and swap to another. Here, the action is switching from Anakin to Ahsoka.

Into Space

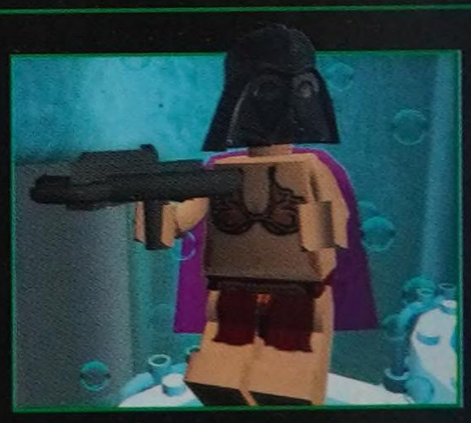

As well as playing as minifigures, the digital world allows gamers to control spaceships and, on a grander scale, fly some of the most iconic LEGO Star Wars craft. In LEGO Star Wars II: The Original Trilogy, you can unlock Slave I and achieve every wannabe-pilot's dream: pilot an X-wing to destroy the Death Star itself!

Brick by Brick

The digital LEGO world presents lifelike building challenges. See a pile of bricks? Wait whilst your on-screen minifigure assembles them into a recognizable LEGO Star Wars structure before progressing farther.

BUILD YOUR OWN
Highlighting the humorous and fun aspects of LEGO playability, after unlocking all characters, you can customize minfigures and give them a whole new look. Fancy playing as Slave Girl Vader? Now you can!

TV Specials

If the interactive video games brought the LEGO® Star Wars® theme to life, then in 2009, the animated TV specials introduced R2-D2 and all his LEGO minifigure friends to the big screen. The humor and fun of these "shorts" continues to go from strength to strength.

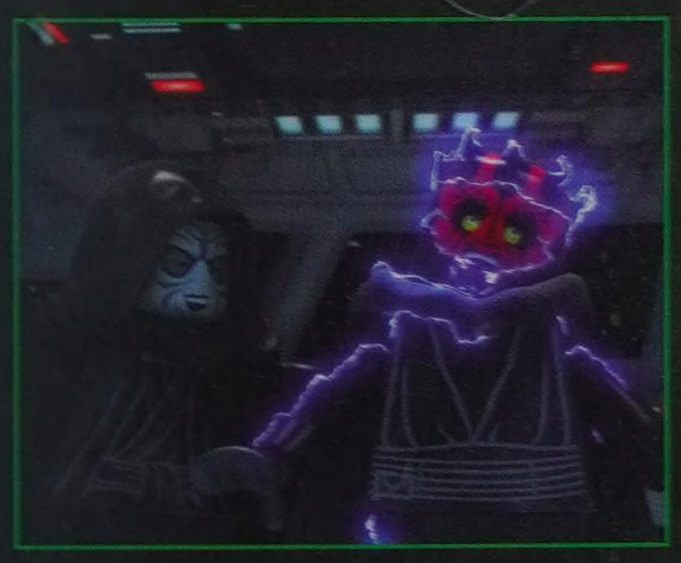

The Quest for R2-D2

To celebrate 10 highly successful years of the LEGO Star Wars line, Lucasfilm and the LEGO Group came together in 2009 to produce their first ever short film. As the title suggests, The Quest for R2-D2 makes a certain LEGO droid its star player as he is lost, found, and makes a female astromech friend. There is even a cameo appearance from a LEGO Indiana Jones.

The five minutes of animated LEGO fun premiered on Cartoon Network.

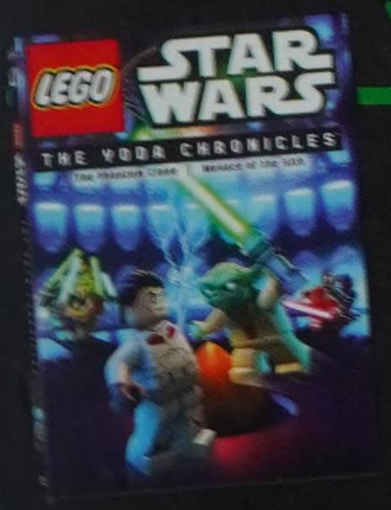

The Empire Strikes Out

A gleeful Sith Lord accidentally blasts his young apprentice with Force lightning.

Father-son issues are a familiar theme in Star Wars, but the 2012 episode The Empire Strikes Out takes this to whole new levels. In it, Darth Vader and Darth Maul squabble for their Master's attentions, while Death Star-destroyer Luke Skywalker is hounded across the galaxy by besotted fangirls.

The Yoda Chronicles

The Yoda Chronicles is set in the Prequel years, with an emphasis on the conflict between good and evil.

Having progressed from five to thirty minutes in length, the first episode of a LEGO Star Wars TV trilogy launched in 2013. The Yoda Chronicles "The Phantom Clone" aired in 2013, followed by "Menace of the Sith," and concluding with "Attack of the Jedi"—with more episodes to follow in 2014. The mini-series focuses on Grand Master Yoda, and also introduces the lone clone JEK-14.

Bombad Bounty

Following on from The Quest for R2-D2, 2010 saw the release of its sequel Bombad Bounty. The five minute-long comedic episode follows Boba Fett and Jar Jar Binks, and plays homage to many other popular films.

In his starring role, Jar Jar starts out mopping the ship floor, inadvertently causing Darth Vader to slip up!

The Padawan Menace

Young Padawans are treated to a tour of Coruscant before chaos breaks out!

Featuring familiar voices from the Star Wars: The Clone Wars TV series, the 30-minute long animation The Padawan Menace appeared on TV screens in 2011. The script featured in-jokes crossing over from episodes I–VI, and was also the animated episode to introduce the world to the young and mischievous minifigure "Ian"—otherwise known as Han Solo—and a minifigure version of George Lucas himself.

Yoda and Asajj Ventress engage in a duel, during which Asajj is sliced in half—only to reassemble her LEGO parts and carry on!

Evil Sith Lord Darth Sidious recruits General Grievous to aid him in his dark plans to control the galaxy.

A disturbance in the Force distracts Yoda from training Padawans.

Minifigure Gallery

The vast collection of LEGO® Star Wars® minifigures features imaginative molds and accessories, some of which were specially designed for the unique characters and species found in the Star Wars universe. The basic LEGO minifigure arrives for the builder to assemble in three sections: a head; a torso (with and arms and hands); and hips and legs. Many Star Wars minifigures also include exciting extras, such as helmets, interesting hair pieces, and of course, lightsabers!
